

Navy to scrap 300 ships from mothball fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is scrapping nearly 300 old carriers, cruisers and other ships in the first major reduction of its "mothball fleet" since World War II.

Describing them as either worn-out or outdated, the Navy said the 291 ships being sold for scrap "can no longer be economically utilized."

Most were built more than 30 years ago to fight in World War II and the increasingly sophisticated missile systems, electronics and other advanced equipment are incompatible to such old ships, the Navy said.

Their scrapping will leave 536 ships and smaller craft in the Navy's reserve fleet, including many retired in the past five years as the active fleet was cut back sharply

The Navy said it expects to net about $20 million, which will buy about one-third of a new patrol frigate

The Navy developed scientific cocooning techniques around the end of World War II which permitted the layup of much of the then-huge fleet for future emergencies. Machinery, guns and other equipment were preserved while the ships were moored like ghosts along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and in the Gulf of Mexico.

Ships were demothballed and recalled to active duty in six crises and wars after 1945. The biggest such recall came during the Korean War when 549 ships and craft were recommissioned. This was only five years after World War II and many of the ships still were young.

By the time the United States launched into large-scale war in Vietnam, many of the mothballed ships were more than 20 years old. But 50 vessels were reactivated for duty, which included naval shelling of North Vietnam.

It took many months to get them ready for sea, and there were reports during the war that some elderly destroyers showed signs of breaking up under structural strain caused by the heavy firing of their gun batteries.

The battleship New Jersey was brought out of mothballs, but more than eight months and about $22 million were spent to get it in shape for bombardment duty off Vietnam. Critics said it was a waste of money.

The Navy said none of the remaining four battleships — the New Jersey, Iowa, Wisconsin and Missouri — is on the list to be scrapped.

The list does include five aircraft carriers, all of the World War II vintage Essex class. Besides the Essex, they are the Yorktown, Ticonderoga, Randolph and Antietam.

Also bound for the scrap pile are 10 cruisers — the Boston, Quincy, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Rochester, Helena, Bremerton, Toledo, Galveston and Topeka.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — From the pulpit where three previous generations of his family preached love and human dignity, young Derek King urged the congregation to "let the Lord take care of vengeance."

Derek Barber King, a 20-year-old ministerial student, preached his trial sermon Sunday only a few feet from where he helped subdue the gunman who killed his grandmother a week ago as she played the organ.

The slim, bespectacled youth is the son of the late Rev. A. D. King, who drowned in 1969, and nephew of the famed civil rights leader and Nobel Prize winner, Martin Luther King Jr., slain in 1968.

"There're going to be some Kings preaching at Ebenezer for generations to come," said Derek's white-haired grandfather, the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., who buried his wife Wednesday.

Turning to Derek, who, sat gripping the arms of his chair, the patriarch of the King clan asked his grandson, "Now, Derek, do you want another song?"

The youth nodded and smiled. The Ebenezer Baptist Church choir sang, "Lead me."

Then, stepping up to the pulpit and hunching forward, the younger King preached on "The Greatest of These is Love."

"Death is running amok in our society," he said. "We tend to rely on vengeance for something we don't understand."

"We have to rely on love to overcome the hurting emotions of the moment," said the youth, never glancing up from his notes. "God will take care of the vengeance."

The doctrine of love preached in the youthful voice was hauntingly reminiscent of the famous sermons of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Former publisher Vanderbilt dies

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., author and former newspaperman, is dead at 76.

Great-grandson of the New York Central Railroad's first president, Vanderbilt died Sunday at his Miami Beach home after a five-year illness. The cause of death was not announced.

Vanderbilt was publisher during the 1920s of the Illustrated Daily News of Los Angeles, Illustrated Daily Herald in San Francisco and the Illustrated Daily Tab in Miami.

His books included "Farewell to Fifth Avenue" in 1935, "The Vanderbilt Feud" in 1956, "The Living Past of America" in 1955, and his autobiography, "Man of the World" in 1959 and "Ranches and Ranch Life" in 1967.

His works reflected his life as a world traveler and correspondent for various newspapers. He was proud of early interviews with Adolf Hitler, Joseph Stalin, Benito Mussolini and Winston Churchill.

He is survived by his widow Mary Lou, who became his seventh wife in 1967. His first six marriages ended in divorce.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

15-ton mirror for telescope is unpacked

VICTORIA, B.C. (AP) — The 15-ton glass blank destined to be the primary mirror in a volcano-top telescope on Hawaii was unpacked here from its iron crate, 10 months after it arrived at Dominion Astrophysical Observatory from France.

Observatory director K. O. Wright said Friday it will take until the end of 1976 to grind the 144-inch-diameter mirror. It is made of cerium, a glass-ceramic material impervious to temperature changes and thus resistant to distortion-causing expansion and contraction in heat and cold.

Wright said "political wrangling" between Canada and France over cost-sharing delayed the mirror almost a year.

It was originally bought in the United States and shipped to France for preparation, but the French National Scientific Research Center sent it here after Canada decided to take part in the project.

Canada and France share 85 per cent of the viewing time on the telescope, with the University of Hawaii taking 15 per cent.

Another King debuts at Ebenezer

Derek's preaching, the young man relaxed and his voice became stronger.

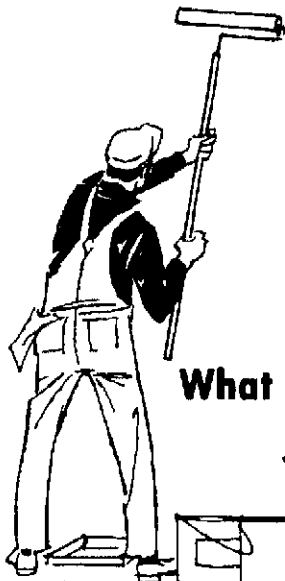

His grandfather smiled benignly on him throughout the sermon which ended with, "Hold on, hold on. He will fight your battles."

Then the Rev. Mr. King Sr. took the pulpit to say

"I feel like shouting. I'm going to hold it if I can. But I feel like shouting."

Young King's great-grandfather, the Rev. A. D. Williams, preached in Ebenezer from 1896 until his death in 1931.

It was in this church that King Jr. always returned after his role as a civil rights leader brought him international fame. Ebenezer church was a touchstone for King throughout his turbulent career which ended when he was gunned down by an assassin's bullet.

The decorations should be in colors. Almost any designs will be suitable. Ships may be used, for example. If you do not wish to draw the designs, use cutouts from magazines and glue them to the shopping bag.

When the decorating has been completed, give the entire outside of the bag a coat of shellac to preserve your art work.

Apply two coats to the entire inside to protect the paper when you carry damp objects in the bag, such as a bathing suit and beach towels.

Make several of these special bags, one for each member of your family.

You'll find they are useful not only when going to the beach, but for carrying equipment needed on a picnic. %

Local women witness history as caucus urges financial backing

WICHITA, Kan. — Two local women representing the Fox Valley Women's Political Caucus witnessed history June 28 and 29 as 600 delegates from throughout the nation voted their financial support in an effort to increase the numbers of females in politics during the National Women's Political Caucus meeting.

Ruth Duginski and Jacqueline Lee were among those who were told to dig deeper into their pockets to insure equal political representation of women in politics.

One of the recommendations sought to increase per-person dues from $1 to $20 which may mean the first stability of the caucus since its founding almost three years ago.

Said Jane McMichael, caucus executive director, "Women are realizing they have to pay for power. I think for the first time the caucus women realized they were going to have to put in money to create change. It is a long time coming."

According to Duginski, eight basic issues will be supported by the National Women's Political Caucus.

These issues include Women's Educational Equity Act, campaign financing reform, pension reform, credit reform, social security for homemakers, Supreme Court abortion decision, flexible work hours, and federally funded day care.

The same theme echoed from each of the nationally known speakers.

"We women want power in our own right. We want to make a statement that we not only want political power for ourselves but for political and economic change for others."

Delegates rose in applause time and again as New York Congresswoman

Bella Abzug, Ms. Magazine publisher Gloria Steinem and caucus chairwoman Frances (Sissy) Farenthold hammered home the point that women are no longer content merely to work for male candidates. They must become candidates themselves, they stressed.

"We want women candidates and we want those candidates to fight for women and for all humanity," Abzug emphasized.

Representative Abzug admitted to sometimes being lonely as one of only 16 women currently serving in the Congress.

She stated that she was lonely Thursday evening when she led the opposition to an omnibus anti-abortion and sterilization rider to the Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill, and prevailed.

Farenthold, twice a gubernatorial candidate in Texas, noted the dramatic increase in the number of women in public office: 74 per cent this year over 1970 and 24 per cent over 1972.

Approximately 110 women are known to be running for Congress this year, three for the Senate and at least 42 for statewide offices.

The group's recommendations will be presented to the NWPC Policy Council for a vote in September. The next national convention will be held in Boston in June of 1975.

Julie keeps a promise, writes book for daughter

By SANDRA GITTENS

NEW YORK (AP) — Keeping a promise to a child is perhaps one of the most difficult things a parent "has" to do. Nevertheless, the results can sometimes be a source of pleasure for both child and parent.

So says Julie Andrews, film and Broadway star, who started out to write a "page full of nonsense" to satisfy her daughter Jenny, and ended up with a published children's novel of 188 pages called "Mandy."

That was three years ago. Now, using the same talent Jenny sparked, Julie has written a second book, "The Last of the Really Great Whangdoodles." It's dedicated to her husband, Blake Edwards, and as its author she uses the name Julie Edwards.

"Mandy," she explains, "came about as a result of a game we were playing. While we were in Paris, Jenny and my other two children were running wild. I was busy making a film and we were all on sort of a holiday. I couldn't keep an eye on them very well. So I devised a game where I said, 'Okay, if you don't pick up your laundry, and if you don't brush your teeth at least once a day, and if you don't change your underwear, then you'll have to pay a forfeit.' And Jenny, who is the oldest, said, 'Okay, but you'll have to play the game too — you've got to stop swearing so much.'"

"Well, I lost the game in about 10 minutes of that conversation. And she said, 'Your forfeit should be, write me a story.' And that's exactly how it happened."

Considering taking the easy way out, Julie first contemplated writing her a page of nonsense, but on second thoughts decided to write her something a little more meaningful that just might teach her something without her realizing it.

"I tried to teach her something she didn't know. She's a city girl and didn't know too much about the country. I'm fond of the country and nature and things like that, so I came up with the idea for 'Mandy.'"

"Jenny was 11 when I got the idea but she was about 14 by the time I presented the book to her. Then I found that I had enjoyed writing that one so much, that I kind of felt lost when I stopped, so I started on the second."

The second also had its unusual beginnings. Looking through the dictionary for a word, Julie said she "literally saw the word whangdoodle." Found in the better dictionaries, she said, the definition is a humorous mythical creature of fanciful and undefined nature.

"I said that's a marvelous name and I'll call the book 'The Last of the Really Great Whangdoodles,' and the title never changed. The story kind of grew out of the idea for the title."

Since "Mandy" was only her first effort, Julie said she set out to teach a little more in "The Last of the Really Great Whangdoodles." Today, she explained, children are going through a great depersonalization. Things are being hurled at them so fast and the world is changing quickly — with the media feeding emotions to them — that ordinary things like using their imaginations and keeping an open mind are being lost.

"For instance," she said, "I think most children would rather sit in front of a television set and get all their feelings second hand rather than go down the block, or climb a tree, or build a club house. I'm saying don't lose your imagination, don't stop thinking for yourself, don't just sit and be fed. Go out and do and keep aware and awake. I've tried to do it with a lot of humor."

Her latest book follows the imaginations of three fairly bright youngsters who wander off to find the Whangdoodle, which has disappeared. Their trip teaches them a few lessons along the way — like how to behave.

Julie is the mother of three children. Jenny, her oldest stepdaughter, is 17, her stepson, Jeffrey, is 14, and her own daughter Emma, is 11.

Year's growth

Local Altrusa Club gets award at district meet

OSHKOSH — Altrusa Club of Appleton received the Mamie L. Bass Community Service Award for District 7 during the recent district conference at the Pioneer Inn here.

As winner of the award, Altrusa Club will enter its Applefest project in the International Altrusa Biennial Competition at the 1975 international convention in Chicago. District 7 is composed of 40 clubs from seven north-central states and two Canadian provinces.

Although Applefest became incorporated and formed a board of directors, four Altrusa members became board members in order to maintain Altrusa leadership of Applefest. They are Maxine Vanevenhoven, Pat Brooks, Waneita Steinert and Betty Dollevoet.

Heading up Altrusa's slate of officers for the coming year will be Lilas Dohr, president. Serving with her will be Mrs. William Beyer, first vice president; Mrs. Vanevenhoven, second vice president; Mrs. Joseph T. Burke, recording secretary; Mrs. Douglas R. Andersen, treasurer; Mary Howden, director; Margaret Carroll, director, and Mrs. O. Reynold Steinert, immediate past president.

Following the group's international theme, "Let Us Be a Channel for Change," Altrusa Club of Appleton will promote service projects such as Applefest, American Field Service, Fox Valley Technical Institute scholarship, the Retired Persons Program at the YMCA, Casa Clare, Christ Child Society, Outagamie County Health Center, Appleton Memorial Hospital, St. Elizabeth Hospital and the Golden Age Club.

Shampooing habits mean healthy hair

More suds does not mean "more clean," according to a family health magazine.

The important part about shampooing hair is to rinse it thoroughly to prevent a filmy haze from remaining to dull hair.

Hair should be washed whenever it looks limp, oily, or dull, the author of the article advises. For normal hair, this usually means every five to six days. For hair that is oily, every two to three days.

An egg or cream shampoo is recommended for women with bleached or permanented hair and a castile shampoo for dry hair. There are also shampoos especially formulated for oily hair.

There are recipes available for dieters

Losing weight seems to be a preoccupation with Fox Valley residents' especially during the summer months. Recipes for dieters are available from two local organizations: Perma-Slim Plan, Inc., and Weight Watchers International.

Both programs concentrate on changing eating habits rather than cutting out foods which may be necessary to health. Of course, changing habits takes hard work and a little discipline, but members of the organizations are usually pleased with their results.

Perma-Slim Plan meets regularly on Tuesdays. The 10 a.m. class is conducted at Prange's on the sixth floor, while the 7:30 p.m. class is at the YMCA. There is a Kimberly session at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Jerry's Bowling Alley. Lecturers for the sessions are Pat Kurtz and Ginnie Kloth.

Weight Watchers hold weekly classes at the Appleton center, 2015 N. Richmond St., on Wednesday and Thursday mornings at 10 a.m. and evenings at 7 p.m. In Neenah they meet at 7 p.m. Mondays at the Ramada Inn. There are also meetings in outlying areas, including Waupaca, Kiel and Chilton.

Registration fees and a weekly class fee are required by both groups, but the public is invited to drop in on any meeting to see what the organization is like before joining.

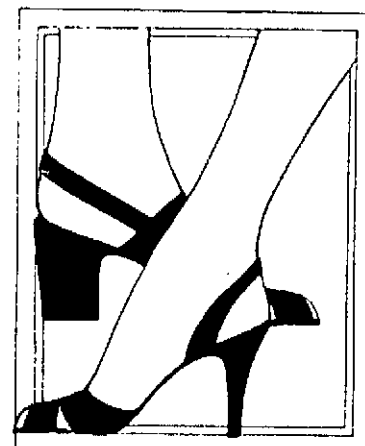

Some of the new recipes available from Weight Watchers are frozen desserts made with fruit. There is apple creme, pineapple souffle, blueberry chantilly crepe, apricot chiffon, and others. These recipes and others, as well as a free brochure, are available by request from the Green Bay office, 425 S. Military Ave., Green Bay, Wis. 54303.

Perma-Slim offers a cookbook with such tantalizing recipes as banana slush, sassy tuna salad, pickled shrimp and noodle egg bake. The cookbook covers recipes for cheese, desserts, eggs, fish, liver, meat, poultry, veal, vegetables and salads, and sauces and soups. "Dine Your Way to Permanent Slimness or How to be a Svelte Gourmet," by Sylvia Brandt, is available by contacting Mrs. Pat Kurtz, 628 Lee St., Brillion, Wis., or by writing to Barovoy, Inc., 5806 N. Port Washington Road, Glendale, Wis. 53209.

Ann Landers

Trip could cause problems

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 50-year-old woman with a wonderful husband and a handsome 18-year-old son. We have a fine homelife and I am one of the happiest people I know.

Recently I dreamed about the man I divorced 20 years ago. We were married briefly and had no children. I had barely thought of him all these years, but after that dream I had an uncontrollable impulse to phone him long-distance to find out how his life had gone.

He was easy to locate. I learned he has a good marriage and five teenagers. Here's the problem: I have a progressive case of glaucoma. In a few years I may be sightless. I want to take a cross-country trip to see my ex-husband and his family while I still have my eyes. My husband says if I go, I shouldn't bother to come back.

Why should it be a crime to see one's ex? He was also a part of my life. Or am I completely insane? As I get older I become increasingly concerned about meeting my Maker. I want to remove all feelings of ill will between myself and every living soul. Please provide an answer for me and for millions of other divorced people who share this problem.—Uncertain

Dear U.: If you could persuade your husband to go with you, and perhaps take your son along, it would cast an entirely different light on the trip and be an excellent compromise. If, however, you are unable to persuade him, my advice is to stay home and forget it. "Your Maker" will understand.

In my opinion, it would be a mistake to jeopardize what sounds like a fine marriage to satisfy a "sudden impulse." And there's always the possibility that his present wife might resent it if you turned up out of the blue—alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm scared to death my daughter is a shoplifter and I don't know what to do about it.

She's not a child—she's 24 years old, married, and lives in another city. Several days ago, she came to visit me for the weekend. We went shopping together and she asked me to lend her a few dollars to pay for some cosmetics because she had left her wallet at the house. I did so, gladly. Later that day we went into the linen department and I purchased some towels and bed-sheets. My daughter admired some lovely embroidered napkins, but passed them up because she "couldn't afford them."

Later that evening she went out with friends. I wanted to try the new cosmetics so I went into her room. The cosmetics weren't on the dresser so I opened her suitcase. My heart sank when I found, along with the cosmetics, the beautiful embroidered napkins—six of them, with the price tags still attached. I am heartsick and don't know what to do.

She's an intelligent person and I don't understand how she can take such a chance with her reputation. I love this girl very much and can't bring myself to tell her for fear she'll hate me for "snooping" in her suitcase.

I need your advice, Ann.—Heartsick Mother

Dear Mother: You must tell your daughter, at the earliest opportunity, that you know about the embroidered napkins. Explain you know she's not a thief, but she's unwell and needs professional help. Urge her to seek that help at once.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654. (Copyright 1974)

Be happy we don't live in Republic of Egdirb

In the ancient republic of Egdirb you are not allowed to consider the bidding when you finally play a hand. As today's hand indicates, this tradition often forces you to play the game backwards.

West cashed the top diamonds and then shifted to a trump. South drew trumps and led a heart to dummy to take the club finesse.

When the club finesse lost, South was in the soup. He had to lose another club trick for a score of minus 100 points.

"It was a reasonable contract," South declared. "There was an even chance that the king of clubs would be right for us."

And with the Egdirbian gibberish they were off to the next hand.

CHANCE WASN'T EVEN

It was a reasonable game contract, but the location of the king of clubs was far from an even chance. What could West have for his vulnerable takeout double of one spade?

West didn't have ideal distribution, since he followed to two rounds of spades. Hence West surely had good high-card strength. The odds were about 100 to 1 that West needed the king of clubs for some reasonable sort of takeout double.

If South read the bidding properly he would draw two rounds of trumps, lead out the ace of clubs, enter dummy with a heart and lead a club toward his hand. When East plays the ten, South must duck. The best chance is that West must play the king anyway.

South can clear up the rest of the clubs later by leading the queen of clubs. Playing West for the singleton or doubleton king of clubs is the best chance for the contract.

THRIFTY NIFTY By Helen Robertson

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Accident victim best left alone by layman

Dear Dr. Thosteson: People have been warned not to move accident victims unnecessarily (I've seen a case, I believe, where they should have been told that). Doesn't the same apply in case of a stroke?

My husband had a stroke. I called the doctor and an ambulance and reassured him but left him lying there for the ambulance men to handle.

Of course the fact that he weighs twice as much as I do had something to do with my good judgment. At any rate, he was recovering and home in four days.

Isn't it a mistake to pick up the victim and seat him on a chair, as they did to someone I knew? Maybe she would have died anyway, but I don't think moving her helped. People seem to think we "must do something." — L.S.S.

You are entirely right. True, it's a human desire to want to "do something," but within certain limits, the less you do, the better. Doing something seldom helps, it can do substantial harm.

For either an injured or a stroke victim, the collar should be loosened and the head turned to one side to avoid "swallowing the tongue" and obstructing the airway. Possibly the head may be raised on a pillow.

But that's about all — except, of course, if the victim should fall against a hot pipe, a radiator, stove, or such hazard, move him gently.

Other than that, wait for the doctor to decide what to do because there is little to be done immediately for a stroke victim, except exactly what you did. Getting him up on a chair is totally pointless. He's better off lying down and being kept calm.

In violent accidents, pressure ought to be applied to stop heavy bleeding and, if you know what you are doing, a tourniquet may be needed, but clumsy tourniquets can do more damage than good. And if there are bone fractures, by all means, the least movement possible!

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 15 and have tried different advertised products to make my hair grow. Is there any special cream or medicine to make it grow long? I'm fed up with these advertisements. I've tried everything. You name it, I've tried it. — L.F.

Most of us have a "natural length" and when hairs reach that length, they break off and new ones start to grow. I'm sorry, but I just don't know of any way to change this. But the great number of patent "remedies" advertised would indicate that a lot of people keep hoping.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read in your column about the hairless chest. I am married to a man whose chest is "bald." He was being teased by a bunch of hairier friends and it was my pleasure to put a stop to it. I simply said, "Any ordinary male can grow hair on his chest but it takes a real man to keep it worn off!" Perhaps this could be of use to other bare-chested men. — D.J.B.

Consider the idea passed on.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 64 and have diverticulosis. My doctor has me on a bland diet and medication. I got up at 4:30 this morning with cramps. The longer I lie in bed, the worse it gets.

It's better to blot out rug stains than to rub out.

After I eat and walk around, I'm all right. I would like to know why I get cramps early in the morning and not during the day. — Mrs. I.M.

An accumulation of stool and gas in the colon could cause morning cramps. The apparent reason for being free from cramps the rest of the day is that your morning bowel movement relieves the pressure and distension in the colon.

Perhaps you could alter your eating habits slightly. For example, avoid heavy evening meals or late night snacking, if you are used to that.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To learn more about it, write for Thosteson's booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," in care of The Post-Crescent. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

President back at White House after unannounced trip to Palm Beach area

Monday, July 8, 1974

The Post-Crescent, Appleton-Neenah-Menasha, Wis

A-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — Back in the White House where he has spent only two full days in the past month, President Nixon moved into a series of meetings and conferences on domestic issues today.

His first appointment was a mid-morning meeting with Vice President Gerald R. Ford, followed by a session with Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar Weinberger.

The President summoned his four counselors — Anne Armstrong, Dean Burch, Kenneth Rush and Roy L. Ash — for a late morning conference in the Oval Office.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon conferred by telephone Sunday with his chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, but did not meet with him prior to today's Supreme Court hearing on the question of whether Nixon must comply with a subpoena from Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski for the tapes of 64 White House conversations.

Jaworski wants the tapes as evidence in the Watergate cover-up trial scheduled to begin in September.

Nixon, who has traveled to nine countries during the past four weeks, arranged to meet with five of his top economic advisers on Tuesday.

Then on Wednesday morning Nixon meets with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders on his June-July trips to the Middle East and the Soviet Union, Ziegler said.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, due here Tuesday after reporting to European leaders on the Soviet journey, will join Nixon in briefing the congressional delegation.

Ziegler said the President also will meet with the Cabinet on Thursday.

Nixon is expected to fly to his San Clemente, Calif., home late in the week for a stay of about 10 days. He flew here from Key Biscayne, Fla., Sunday night.

Unannounced, Nixon flew by helicopter Sunday to Palm Beach to inspect the palatial Mar-A-Lago estate willed to the government by Mrs. Marjorie Merriweather Post, who died last year. The 17-acre spread, which boasts its own nine-hole golf course, will be available as a presidential retreat, meeting place and guest house for visiting world leaders.

White House sources discounted the possibility Nixon might be thinking of selling his Key Biscayne properties to meet heavy financial obligations, such as payment of back taxes and the mortgage on his California estate.

However, should he ever decide on such a move, the 115-room Palm Beach mansion could be made available as a Florida White House.

Nixon, who personally overruled plans to take a small group of newsmen with him to Palm Beach, was said to have spent half an hour inspecting the property with Florida neighbor C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo and two White House aides.

On Sunday afternoon, Nixon took a swim, walked on the sand beach outside his Key Biscayne compound, and cruised for 40 minutes on Biscayne Bay aboard Rebozo's houseboat, Coco Lobo III.

The President and Mrs. Nixon, accompanied by Rebozo, were discovered by newsmen Saturday night dining at the Key Biscayne Hotel, where Nixon thrilled a 10-year-old Florida girl by whirling her onto the dance floor.

The chief executive showed no evidence of being hampered by the chronic thrombophlebitis that cropped up in his left leg last month.

The Nixons had been in Key Biscayne since their return from Moscow Wednesday night.

Tanaka's party holds on to slim lead in Japan's upper house of parliament

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's conservative Liberal-Democrats appeared likely today to hang on to their majority in the upper house of the Japanese parliament.

It was not as clear, however, whether the party's majority would be big enough to demonstrate that Tanaka's popularity with the voters had improved.

With most of the votes counted, the Liberal-Democrat party had won 57 of the 70 contested seats it held before the election, giving it 121 when combined with its uncontested seats. A computer projection by the Japan Broadcasting Corp. predicted that the Liberal-Democrats would win 65 seats, two more than a majority.

The Socialists won 27 seats for a total of 61.

Several smaller parties won a few seats including the Komeito or Clean Government party, the Communists and Democratic Socialists.

The upper house, or House of Councillors, is a type of watchdog body, able to do little more than delay enactment of laws passed by the 491-seat lower house, the House of Representatives.

The significance of the current election is that it is expected to indicate opposition party strength after a quarter-century of rule by pro-Western factions of the Liberal-Democrats.

Final results will not be known until early Tuesday. However, there were indications that the heavy urban vote was running increasingly against Tanaka's party.

At stake were 130 seats, half the total 252 seats plus four vacancies. The Liberal Democrats needed to win only 63 to get a majority again. The upper house has little legislative power and the government has a big majority of more than 80 votes in the lower house. But anything less than its previous eight-seat edge in the upper house would be considered a setback for Tanaka, who has been making a very poor showing in recent public opinion polls.

The prime minister demonstrated that he viewed the election as a major test of his leadership by campaigning actively in 34 of the nation's 48 prefectures.

His party's position was strengthened by the inability of the major opposition groups to agree on a common platform.

There was a record turnout of more than 73 per cent of the eligible voters exceeding the previous mark of 72 per cent in 1950. Officials attributed the turnout to concern over inflation and rising prices and charges of campaign interference by big business.

One candidate for re-election, television personality Yukio Aoshima, went to Europe for the last three weeks of the campaign to demonstrate his scorn for the expensive campaigns other candidates put on. He won.

News conference for Chenault being sought

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — An attorney for the man charged with slaying Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. says he expects to know by Wednesday whether authorities will allow his client to hold a news conference.

Attorney Randy Bacote said Saturday he is continuing efforts to arrange the news conference because Marcus Wayne Chenault, 23, wants to clear up "some small details that are not prejudicial to his case — his childhood, possible associations he has had."

Chenault, who is accused of slaying Mrs. King and a deacon, Edward Boykin, on June 30, "wants everyone to be aware of his feelings and thoughts and this can only be done first-hand," Bacote said.

He said a news conference with newsmen had been arranged for last Friday but it was prohibited by Dist. Atty. Lewis Slaton.

Slaton said he wanted "to insure the fair disposition of this case in court." But Bacote said questions could be limited to avoid incriminating Chenault.

Bacote said he would meet with Slaton and possibly take legal action seeking the news conference, but was unsure what kind of action could be taken.

List is key to historic seats

WASHINGTON (AP) A list of names on a battered yellow pad was the key to a seat today in a historic confrontation between lawyers for President Nixon and special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski before the Supreme Court.

Keeper of the list was Bruce Kaplan of Chicago, a student working in Washington for the summer who was No. 8 in line, having arrived on the scene Sunday morning.

More than 250 other persons, mainly of college age, waited with Kaplan early today in front of the building.

They kept in order by using the yellow pad list showing who had arrived first, who second, and so forth in order to be sure the first to arrive also would be the first admitted to the courtroom.

Kaplan said the list was started because they were not allowed across the street onto the court steps until around midnight Sunday and the line to enter could only be formed then.

Police took the youths across the street in groups of 10 following the order of the list and Sgt. Joseph Reid of the force guarding the court complimented their organization.

"These characters are all right," Reid remarked, scanning the long line which snaked down the steps, along a row of hedges and onto the sidewalk.

Kaplan said the list was set up by the early arrivals to "prevent a lot of pushing and shoving," and "to try and keep as orderly as possible."

Organizers of the list walked along the waiting line on the court steps with a flashlight checking those in line to prevent "crashing" and make sure those listed first got their proper places.

Kaplan said the guards at the court told him that between 50 and 100 spectator seats were available for the entire court session out of 423 spectator seats. Twenty-seven others are being used by spectators on a five-minute rotation basis. The rest of the seats have

High court hears tapes arguments

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James D. St. Clair told the Supreme Court today it is being drawn "inevitably and inexorably" into the impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

Asking the court to overturn a lower court order directing the President to produce tapes and documents sought by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski for use in the Watergate coverup trial, St. Clair said:

"No one could argue that the proceedings before this court will have no impact" on the impeachment deliberations of the House Judiciary Committee.

"The special prosecutor is drawing this court into those proceedings inevitably and inexorably," St. Clair said.

Jaworski, who preceded St. Clair in the oral arguments before the court, said that if President Nixon or any president is free to rule that the Constitution "means what he says it does" without Supreme Court review, then Americans are no longer equal under the law.

And the special prosecutor said it would be particularly inappropriate to vest such power in President Nixon "in a personally delicate situation involving criminal charges against two of his former closest aides and devotees," John D. Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman.

Justice Potter Stewart asked St. Clair whether he meant the court should be "stopped dead in its tracks" because the impeachment proceedings were under way.

St. Clair said he did not, but argued that impeachment itself should be left solely to the legislative branch of government as provided in the Constitution.

Some members of the House Judiciary Committee were among the hundreds in the crowded courtroom.

Jaworski consumed nearly an hour of the historic hearing presenting his opening argument and answering numerous questions from the eight justices taking part in the case.

The Supreme Court extended its 1973-74 term, originally scheduled to end late last month, to hear the arguments from Jaworski and St. Clair over whether President Nixon must surrender the material sought by the special prosecutor.

Jaworski said that he was told when he was hired as special prosecutor that "I would have the right to take the President to court."

But St. Clair argued again and again that President Nixon had not relinquished his right to decide what confidential conversations should be made available.

"The right to force the President to give up confidential communications — that was not delegated," St. Clair said.

He said it was Jaworski's point of view that as special prosecutor "he's a fourth entity" of government when there are only three branches: The executive, legislative and judicial.

Jaworski noted that Nixon had said last November that Haldeman and Ehrlichman would "come out all right when the proceedings are completed" in the over-all Watergate case.

"Add to this setting, and I refer to it in great sorrow, the fact that a grand jury, by unanimous vote, concluded that the President was a participant in the chain of events that constituted the charged conspiracy..." Jaworski said.

Nixon was named as an unindicted co-conspirator by the grand jury that indicted Haldeman and Ehrlichman in the Watergate cover-up.

One of the issues before the Supreme Court was whether the grand jury exceeded its authority in naming Nixon.

Given the circumstances of the case, Jaworski said, he would consider it a mockery "to let the President apply his construction of the Constitution without a review by this court."

St. Clair noted that the court has never confronted or resolved the boundaries of executive privilege, the doctrine of confidentiality under which Nixon claims the power to withhold the subpoenaed tapes and documents.

Aged man got angry

MIAMI (AP) — An elderly man disarmed a teen-age intruder in a burst of rage and his wife killed the would-be robber.

"I was so mad I just wanted to pop him once real good in the face," said Hiram Porter, 79. "I can't remember ever being that mad before."

"It didn't take courage to wrestle with him — just mad."

Police said Porter's wife, Ella, 55, killed Michael Perpall, 18, with a single shot in the chest Saturday after he broke into their cottage at a senior citizens housing project.

Porter, a retired airline employe, says he ignored his arthritic knee and wrested a rifle out of the youth's hands as they fought their way from the kitchen, through the living room and onto the front porch.

"He just came right in and bammed me with the rifle butt in the face," Porter said later as he nursed a blue swelling on one eye.

"That got me mad. I grabbed at his rifle and he held on and we just kept pulling at one another..."

Porter said he managed to get the youth's rifle and toss it into the living room but the struggle continued as a crowd of neighbors gathered out front.

Mrs. Porter said she heard her husband shout for help and went running with his .22 caliber revolver. She started firing and one shot hit the youth in the chest.

Police said Perpall, on probation after two breaking and entering convictions, died less than an hour later.

"I was scared and thought he was going to kill us," Mrs. Porter said. "I wanted to stop him, not kill him."

European leaders being briefed by Kissinger

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger stopped in London today and met with British officials on prospects for channeling Arab oil money into long-term investments in Western Europe.

The high cost of petroleum and raw materials has contributed to economic instability for many of the allies.

U.S. officials said the tentative objective of Kissinger's talks with Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan is formation of an arrangement for offering attractive investment opportunities to the Arab states.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt broached the subject to Kissinger during the weekend in Munich. Kissinger flew from the West German city today.

Schmidt told newsmen that Europe's economic problems are more important than stalemated East-West negotiations on troop reductions and security measures.

The Arab oil states have been investing some of their enormous returns in European short-term bank accounts. In seeking the stability of long-term investments the Europeans hope to moderate the current high rate of inflation.

The U.S. officials said a joint approach would supplement bilateral deals such as one in which the United States has undertaken to provide technological assistance to Saudi Arabia.

The American secretary of state also is briefing Callaghan, Prime Minister Harold Wilson and others on the Moscow summit meeting between President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Kissinger goes Tuesday to Madrid, the last scheduled stop on his tour to brief West European leaders on Nixon's summit trip.

In West Germany Sunday Kissinger and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt agreed in friendly talks on a wide variety of subjects including energy, currency and relations between the United States and West Germany, their spokesmen reported.

A West German spokesman said Kissinger and Schmidt agreed Sunday that the East-West European security conference in Geneva could be completed before the end of the year and if the outcome of the negotiations was satisfactory to the Western allies, it could end with the mammoth summit conference the Russians want to give it luster.

Asked if the two men talked about Watergate, the spokesman said it "would be quite natural" for them to have touched on the subject. He described the talks as "very open and friendly."

Kissinger's spokesman, Robert Anderson, gave no details. He said only that the two men "achieved a complete unity of views" on U.S.-European relations, East-West relations, the security conference, and nuclear weapons.

After their discussions, Kissinger and Schmidt watched West Germany capture the World Cup soccer championship with a 2-1 victory over the Netherlands at Munich's Olympic Stadium. If he favored the West German team, Kissinger kept it to himself.

Security was extremely tight. Sixteen German soldiers carrying submachine guns trotted alongside Kissinger's car until it stopped at the stadium entrance, and 3,000 police roamed the stadium.

tisfaction with the lower limits."

Wood said the percentage of motorists complying with the lowered speed limits in North Dakota is "quite low. They're not doing 80 or 90 miles an hour... but it isn't 55 m.p.h. either."

The National Safety Council says chance of survival in a crash at 50 m.p.h. is four times greater than at 70 m.p.h. and statistics indicate that 75 per cent compliance with the 55 m.p.h. limit could save 8,500 lives a year.

The 1974 Memorial Day holiday was the first long weekend since speeds were lowered nationwide, and it produced the lowest death toll for a three-day holiday since 1960.

The highway death toll was down 25 per cent during the first three months of this year, compared with 1973, followed by reductions of 22 per cent in April and 23 per cent in May, Kuykendall said.

Kuykendall said year-end figures would be studied in an attempt to determine precisely which factors figured in the total death-reduction picture.

"But I think it's safe to say that the increasing trend in traffic fatalities which we saw up through October of last year has reversed itself," he said.

Slower speeds get credit for saving lives

CHICAGO (AP) — Lowered speed limits are responsible for reducing the Fourth of July holiday traffic death toll by almost one-third, a survey of law enforcement and safety officials indicates.

While officials in some states reported somewhat less traffic than normal during the 102-hour holiday period, most of those questioned Sunday pointed to the 55 mile per hour speed limit as the major factor in reduced highway deaths.

"I think we're reducing the number of deaths every month that we have it and can enforce it adequately," said Col. E. W. Jones, commander of the North Carolina State Patrol.

"Speed comes shining through as the major factor," said a spokesman for the National Safety Council.

The council predicted that 450 to 550 persons would die over the four-day weekend.

The toll for the period was 519, compared with 758 in 1972, the most recent four-day Fourth of July weekend.

The reduced death toll appears "way out of proportion to the relative reduction in miles traveled," said Maj. Richard Lueck of the Minnesota State Patrol. "We can only conclude that the 55 m.p.h. limit is the basic factor."

Highway officials sampled at random by The Associated Press were nearly unanimous in citing reduced speeds as the major factor in the fewer traffic deaths, with some adding reduced travel because of higher gas prices as another major factor.

States contacted included Florida, Louisiana, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Massachusetts, Ohio, North and South Carolina, Connecticut, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Texas, Colorado, Arkansas, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Only Nebraska officials discounted reduced speeds and put the major emphasis on a reduction in travel.

"I don't think the speed limit really has anything to do with it. When there's no traffic, there's no fatalities," a spokesman said. That state's 11 weekend fatalities pushed the toll 5 persons over the July 3-8 period of 1973.

"We had predicted 15 billion miles would be driven over the holiday weekend — not a substantial reduction in travel (compared to 15.7 billion miles in 1972)," said National Safety Council spokesman Ron Kuykendall.

"Other factors may play a part; people may be taking fewer long highway trips. Maybe parents aren't giving teen-agers the car as much because of high gas prices," said Kuykendall.

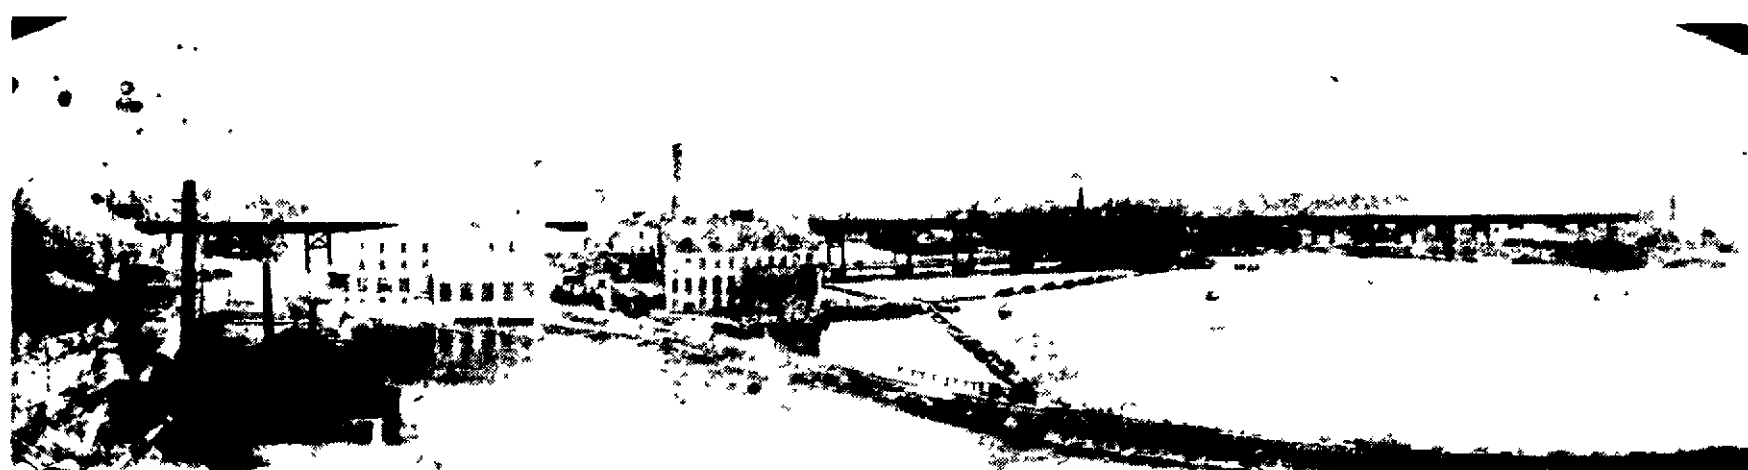

"But speed comes shining through as the major factor in reduced deaths," he said.

"In Louisiana, we have had a 30 per cent lower highway fatality rate this year than the same period last year, and I think this has to be attributed to the lower speed limit," said Col. Donald Thibodaux, state police superintendent.

The Florida Highway Patrol said on Sunday that the death toll had reached only about half of its prediction of 31 traffic fatalities.

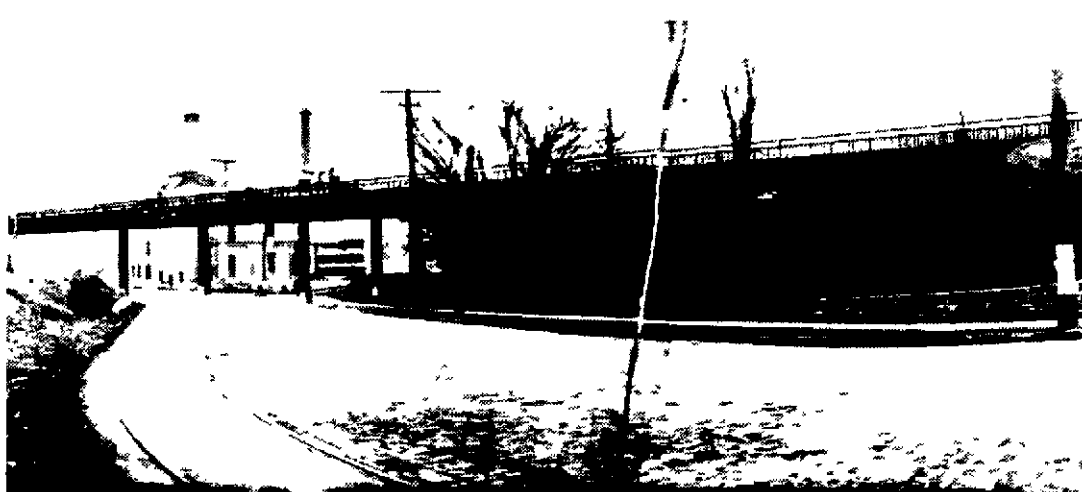

"The 55 m.p.h. speed limit is the whole reason for it. If it was up to 70 m.p.h., no telling how many people would be killed," a patrol spokesman said.

"The lower speed limit is apparently working in terms of saving lives and presumably doing something to save fuel," North Dakota Highway Patrol Superintendent Ralph Wood said. "But it is apparent there is extensive dissa-

The old Oneida 'bridge'

Long before the Appleton City Council and Outagamie County Board allocated $3.5 million each for construction of a high level Oneida Street bridge, local residents considered such a proposal. Back in the early 1920s preliminary drawings of such a span were drawn by consulting engineers Harrington Howard and Associates, Kansas City, Mo. The bridge — inked in over a photograph of the time — runs the same course as the present Oneida Street bridge on the north side. The smaller photo was recently discovered in the attic of city hall.

Higgins urges cooperation in bridge dispute

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County Board Chairman Eugene Higgins this morning called for cooperation between communities in the county on the bridge dispute and "not to build walls."

Higgins appeared before the county highway committee which had been expected to sponsor a resolution asking that the top county bridge priority be transferred from the proposed high level Oneida Street bridge to the proposed French Road bridge.

Supv. Robert Weyenberg, one of the sponsors of the change, said there would be no resolution this month because the Village of Combined Locks has not yet acted on a local resolution to that effect. But committee chairman George Kroes indicated the highway committee may not sponsor a priority change resolution at all. "It's up to the individual communities," he said.

The towns of Vanden Broek and Grand Chute and the villages of Kimberly and Little Chute have passed resolutions asking that the priority be changed. Combined Locks is to consider a similar resolution tonight.

Village President Marvin Schumacher has invited state, county and East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning commission officials to the village board meeting to discuss the bridge issue.

Higgins told the highway committee that Green Bay has gotten three new bridges through cooperation. Outagamie County could lose everything unless there was cooperation here, too, he said.

Weyenberg said no one was "trying to screw Appleton, we're trying to help them." He contended the French Road bridge would help the city and it would not kill the Oneida Street bridge. "The Ninth Street bridge (now under construction) is useless without the French Road bridge," Weyenberg said. He said he was willing to seek support for the French Road bridge without affecting Oneida Street. Higgins said he had no objection to that. There is no reason why both bridges could not be built if there is cooperation, he said.

But, he noted, East-Central projections are that the French Road bridge would not be built until at least 1980, while the Oneida Street bridge is programmed for 1976.

County Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson, who has opposed the Oneida Street bridge since it was proposed, contended that an East-Central study shows the Oneida bridge would not be needed if the French Road bridge is built. He also challenged the 1980 timetable for that bridge.

Supv. Eugene Kloes agreed with Higgins, however, noting that the normal timetable would give at least five years before the bridge could be ready for building.

Inquest called in girl's death

A coroner's inquest will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday into the June 28 death of a 15-year-old Kaukauna girl in a single-vehicle traffic accident west of Freedom.

Julie A. Brown, 900 Laurel Lane, was driving a van that went out of control and rolled over on Vine Road, a half mile south of Outagamie County Trunk E.E.

Injured in the accident were Scott Hanby, 604 W. 10th St., and Rock Gerow, 701 Dodge St., both of Kaukauna.

Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, who said he consulted with Dist. Atty. John Ensley before calling the inquest, reported that six witnesses have been ordered to appear. The inquest will be in County Court Branch 2.

Alderman criticizes mail delivery decision

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent staff writer

The U.S. Postal Service's decision to prohibit front door mail delivery to homes lying more than 30 feet from the street or on lots more than 50 feet wide was an "arbitrary and capricious decision" to "discriminate against the average urban resident of newly developed areas."

That's what Appleton Ald. William Ridgely (20th) wrote in a letter to an official in the postal services government relations office in Washington. The decision is the latest effort to eliminate curbside delivery in at least parts of the city.

The effort began with a plea for a change in the policy by Public Works Director Robert Miller, who said too many mailboxes were being knocked down by his snow plows in the winter.

It was followed by letters from two of the three of the state's federal lawmakers passing along information from Walter Carson, senior representative in the postal service's government relations department, on why the regulations were set.

Ridgely disputed those reasons, saying they are being violated in some sections of the city at the present time and said curbside service in the city is often "deplorable."

He called not only for a resumption of old postal regulations on curbside delivery — which are less stringent — but said Congress should rescind the Postal Reorganization Act and bring mail delivery back under its control.

Ridgely said that the average size of a new residential lot in Appleton is 70 by 120 feet, which puts it far above the postal service maximum of 50 feet wide.

"Even implementation of this policy is not universal as there are sections of E. College Avenue and apartment building complexes within areas affected by this policy which receive 'on

18th ticket issued at Pierce Park

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

Appleton police issued another ticket this morning for what they contend is illegal parking of mobile homes and camper trailers in Pierce Park during the Jaycee Fourth of July civic celebration which ended Sunday night.

The ticket brought to 18 the total of city ordinance violation citations written by police since Saturday morning.

Today's ticket went to Buzz Christman, owner of Christman Amusements of Wautoma, which had the carnival at Pierce Park.

The police department said that only Christman's trailers remained in the park this morning. He had said earlier that it might take him until Tuesday to finish packing and get the trailers out.

Attorney James Long, who represents the Jaycees, said he was out of the city over the weekend and has not yet had a chance to examine the tickets.

Long supposed, though, that he would object to the issuance of the tickets, in large part on grounds that the city ordinance cited relates to mobile home parks and is not applicable to the parking of carnival units.

Persons issued tickets were ordered to appear in Outagamie County Court July 19. The ordinance provides for fines of $1 to $100.

Some Jaycees have said the organization is considering paying the fines if the trailer owners are found guilty.

Long said he believed he would be in court on July 19.

Police began issuing warning tickets to the trailer owners shortly after they started showing up at Pierce Park early last week to prepare for the civic celebration, which began Wednesday.

The tickets were written after a number of park area residents organized efforts to have the celebration moved out of the park. They said they object to noise, littering, trespassing and parking problems created in the neighborhood.

The park has been used for the celebration each year for about 40 years. This is the first year the trailer ordinance has been enforced. Police said the ordinance has been on the books about five or six years.

Police said some of the persons ticketed told them they would have made different lodging arrangements had they known about the ordinance.

Each day the trailers are in the park has to be treated as a separate violation, police explained.

Persons protesting use of the park for the celebration said they would continue organized efforts to move it to a new location before next year.

Many park neighbors do not object to its use for the Fourth of July festivities and have signed petitions of support.

School aid law no problem

By MAIJA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent staff writer

The 13 standards which all school districts will have to meet in order to be eligible for state aids, will cause few difficulties for Fox Cities districts, barring more detailed interpretations, but they are bound to cost the taxpayers.

The standards have been published by the state Department of Public Instruction and are subject to more interpretation, but the local administrators feel that any additions or subtractions will not present too many problems.

What the 13 standards do, in effect, is replace the two different types of state eligibility bases for aids to school districts.

Until a year and a half ago, the districts were eligible either for basic or integrated aids. The basic aids were available to all districts, while the integrated were based on a local taxing formula, and were a "bonus" to those districts which were "willing to tax their people more for a better education."

That has always caused some problems since many of the districts which didn't tax their communities more, simply couldn't afford to, and felt they were penalized.

The new standards give every district equal opportunity and are based on an equalized formula set up by the legislature.

Most of the standards will cause no difficulties, since they deal with standards schools would have had in the past, but in a number of cases, additional personnel will be required.

The most far reaching of these is what is popularly known as Chapter 89, which requires that each district cooperate or otherwise make provisions for special education programs for all handicapped children with exceptional needs between the ages of 3-21.

In Neenah, in somewhat of a surprising move, the fiscal control board approved the hiring of 10 additional teachers to comply with Chapter 89. The cost, which was over and above the budget, came to $62,700.

Menasha is currently studying the problem, but no new teachers have been hired for the fall. According to the officials, however, they are cooperating with Happy Day School, which is sponsored by the N-M Association for Retarded Persons, and covers pre-school children, and working with sending their 16-21 year olds to Gillingham School.

Kaukauna has added teachers in the emotionally disturbed education area and two in learning disabilities, and is giving it more consideration for next year, a spokesman said.

It will cost an additional $55,000 for the additions in Kimberly, which will

Accidents claim two from Valley

Two Fox Valley area residents were killed Sunday in separate Waupaca County accidents.

They were identified as Larry D. Dean, 23, 174 S. Madison St., Clintonville, and Mrs. Anna E. Pethke, 81, route 2, Manawa.

Dean, who had injured his foot at work, was on crutches as he crossed U.S. 45 just south of Clintonville shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday. One passing car narrowly missed him, according to the Waupaca County Traffic Patrol, and as he crossed the centerline, he was struck by a car driven by Steven D. Young, 18, Prospect Street, Bear Creek.

He was taken to Clintonville Community Hospital by the volunteer rescue squad. He died at the hospital of multiple injuries.

Dean was employed at Rich's Food Products in Appleton. He lived in Clintonville, but stayed at 1493 1/2 Appleton Road, Menasha, during the week.

Mrs. Pethke was fatally injured in a near head-on crash about 11 a.m. Sunday in the intersection of State 22 and 110.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, William F. Pethke, 83, as they returned home from church services.

Also injured in that crash and taken to New London Community Hospital were William Ellenbecker, 18, Bear Creek, driver of the second vehicle, and two passengers — Judy Ellenbecker, 14, his sister, and Vicki C. Krake, 15, also of Bear Creek.

Mrs. Pethke was taken from the scene to Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, where she died about 3 p.m.

The Manawa rescue squad took the other four injured persons to New London Community Hospital. Pethke suffered a possible fractured sternum, head cuts, and complained of a sore hand. Miss Krake suffered severe face cuts, Miss Ellenbecker, face cuts and possible internal injuries, and Ellenbecker complained of chest pains and suffered a nose bleed.

According to reports, the Pethke car was traveling north on State 22, attempting to turn onto 110 when it collided with the Ellenbecker car, southbound on 22.

The deaths of 19 other persons on Wisconsin's roads during the four-day Fourth of July holiday period raised the state's toll to 391 for the year, compared with 530 on this date last year.

The toll was for deaths between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday.

James Flink, 25, of Colby lost his life Sunday night when his motorcycle collided with a pickup truck and burst into flames on a town road near Colby in Clark County.

A three-car collision at an Oconomowoc country club entrance early Sunday killed John Grimm, 20, and Michael Bohrmann, 21, both of Oconomowoc. Grimm was driver and Bohrmann a passenger in one of the cars.

Gary N. Erickson, 25, of rural Merrill, died late Sunday afternoon when the car he was in left Wisconsin 86 at the Spirit Falls bridge and rolled over, Lincoln County authorities said.

Industrial uncertainties cloud assessment picture

BY DOUG KOPLIN
Post-Crescent staff writer
NEENAH-MENASHA — Despite what local assessors are considering "a good year" in terms of tax base increases, no one really knows what the net impact is going to be since the state has now taken over all industrial assessments.

Boards of review were scheduled to convene today with all but the Town of Neenah expected to immediately adjourn to dates ranging from late July to mid-August to give assessors time to complete tax rolls.

In Neenah the board adjourned to July 22; Menasha, to Aug. 5, and the Town of Neenah to Aug. 19. This past year has created a host of problems for local assessors since the state assumed the industrial responsibility. The state legislature authorized exemptions for machinery and equipment and pollution abatement equipment. The towns lost property to the city as a watered-down version of the island annexation bill was adopted after years of in-fighting between towns and cities.

Neenah Assessor Earl Page and his Town of Neenah counterpart Paul Becker, are estimating their industrial losses at $9 million and $2.5 million respectively. However, municipal growth in the other major categories — residential and mercantile — are expected to at least make up the difference.

But, it'll be early fall before the municipalities know for sure how much has been gained or lost since the state supervisor of assessments must file a report with local governments documenting the industrial assessments.

While Page and Becker are venturing guesses on the impact, Frank Hallada, Menasha, and Edwin Harold, Town of Neenah, were reluctant to estimate the impact.

However, Page and Hallada pointed out that as state assessors took the city files on industrial property, there was also an invasion of other categories. Page explained that two printing companies, which he had had listed in the mercantile columns, under the new definitions were switched over to the industrial class.

Hallada said most of the changes came in vacant land and he suggested that the switches between mercantile and industrial "will just about even out."

Becker, pointing out that he did not have his tally sheets totaled, suggested that he expected the assessment roll to just about "hold its own." The Town of Neenah, as contrasted with the Town of Menasha, was hit quite hard by the passage of the island annexation bill which gave cities the right to annex land which was surrounded by the city.

The town's loss was slightly less than $300,000, while the City of Neenah gained some $487,000. The difference is the result of a lower level of assessment in the town than the city.

Becker tries to keep property at about 45 per cent of full value while the ratio in Neenah is 70 per cent.

Page, who was faced with a substantial loss of tax base to razed buildings a year ago, said the loss this year was only $168,000 and suggested that the old city hall and old post office — until recently city owned and tax exempt — will be placed on the tax rolls next year after being sold to private enterprise. The city hall will be razed to make way for a retail center and the post office is being remodeled into a supper club.

Although municipalities are losing the industrial tax base, the state legislature established a special fund to insure that a loss of revenue would not have an adverse effect on local tax raising ability.

Little Lake span on schedule for late 1975 completion

TOWN OF MENASHA — There's little doubt that the long-awaited $14 million Little Lake Butte des Morts span and connection to U.S. 41 on the west and Racine Street on the east will be completed in time to carry traffic across the lake by the end of 1975.

Jerry Butler, chief construction engineer for the Division of Highways (DOH) district 3 office in Green Bay, explained that work is scheduled to start on the last of 17 piers this week.

Butler's chief field supervisor, Thomas Contos, added that U.S. Steel, low bidder on the structural steel work, is scheduled to set up shop on the east side early next week as the work is being completed on the west end.

Meanwhile, work on the west side interchange — being financed completely with state and federal funds — is being accelerated so that it'll be ready to hook into the bridge when it's completed.

With construction on schedule for the bridge and interchange, another project started today with a Milwaukee firm installing a median barrier from Winneconne to State 150. The two-mile stretch of highway was considered one of the more hazardous on U.S. 41 since only a six-inch curb divided the north and southbound lanes.

The concrete median barrier will be similar to those seen on the Milwaukee expressways and the new Mason Street bridge in Green Bay — built so that vehicles will slide off.

Contos explained that fill — by the hundreds of thousands of yards was being hauled in to build the west side interchange. Work is nearly completed on the east side. "There's only about a month's work left on the east side," he said.

Butler explained that a large portion of fill, already hauled in at the west shore caved in after soft clay underneath gave way.

"It's one of those natural things," he said, pointing out that the soft underlayer was now being dug out to make way for the west side abutment.

"We had hoped it would settle and consolidate," Butler said, pointing out that the fill operation was suspended late last fall to allow for settling over the winter. "It's just one of those tricks that nature plays on us," he said.

As construction is going full swing on the contracts which already have been awarded, Clem Mertens, district 3 chief design engineer, explained that plans and specifications have been completed for grading and base course for a network of frontage roads between State 110 (at the north end of the Butte des Morts bridge in Oshkosh) and County Trunk G, (just south of Neenah).

The frontage road bids had been rejected in April after costs exceeded engineering estimates by almost 20 per cent. Mertens explained that the current contract has eliminated the bituminous surfacing because of the uncertainty of the asphalt market, due to its being a petroleum derivative.

Bids will now be opened on July 16 in Madison and the intention is to wait until winter before bidding the surfacing. "By that time we hope the asphalt market will have firmed," Mertens explained.

Menasha man in Air Force is found dead

Funeral services were being planned today for Air Force Sgt. Jeffrey G. Reimer, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reimer, Menasha, who died Saturday in Texas.

Authorities in Castroville, Tex., a community about 30 miles west of San Antonio, where Reimer was stationed at Kelly Air Force Base, said Reimer apparently took his own life.

His body was found by children playing on the banks of the Medina River. A shotgun lay nearby.

Reimer was born in Green Bay. He was a graduate of St. Mary Elementary School and St. Mary High School. He had been in the Air Force for four years.

Survivors are his parents and a sister.

Funeral arrangements are pending at the Laemmrich Funeral Home.

Bad year forecast for Fox Valley elm trees

Park and forestry officials are predicting one of the most severe outbreaks of dutch elm disease in the Fox Valley this year.

"It's going to be a bad year," said Floyd Roberts, park and forestry supervisor, Appleton. "Elm trees are dying faster than we can take them down."

"It stinks, its lousy, we are running ahead of last year's toll," said Victor Luedtke, park superintendent and city forester, Kaukauna.

A spokesman for Oshkosh's forestry division said they just started marking trees about a week ago but from all indications, "It's going to be worse this year."

The situation is no better in the Neenah-Menasha area. One forestry official said the disease has been spreading quite rapidly in recent weeks.

Among the factors cited for the increased rate of the disease are a mushrooming population of the beetles which carry the epidemic; the mild winter this year, which allowed many of the beetles to survive; the ineffectiveness of chemicals used to control the disease the above normal moisture in the atmosphere this spring, which produced more sap in the trees for the beetles to germinate; and the delay by city crews and private individuals in removing affected trees, causing the disease to spread.

The latter factor was singled out as one of the main reasons the disease is spreading in Kaukauna. "Quite frankly, some people don't pick up as good as they should," Luedtke said. "They allow the diseased trees to stand, providing a place for the beetles to germinate."

Luedtke said crews from Kaukauna are trying to remove the affected trees as fast as they can. He said about 30 trees have been removed to date this year. Appleton sent out condemnation notices for 35 trees in one day alone, according to Roberts. "This is going to be a banner year," he predicted. "There has been a good hatch of larvae, the winter has been mild and we are just ripe for a higher spiral of the disease."

Roberts advised property owners to be alert for the dutch elm symptoms — stunted and sugge that they take down the affected trees as soon as possible. "I know it requires a large capital outlay, but it's one of the only ways we can prevent the disease from spreading," he said.

Roberts said people should look out for the following symptoms: Wilting, curling and yellowing of elm leaves on one or more branches; brown streaking in the sapwood of wilting branches; a series of brown dots in a single wood ring; unusual leaf fall or death of wilted branches.

Dutch elm disease is caused by a fungus which is carried by the elm bark beetle from infected trees to the upper branches of healthy trees. The fungus invades and blocks the water-conducting vessels of the elm, causing it to wilt and die.

In recent years, Appleton has lost between 100 and 300 trees as a result of the disease.

New look for Neenah musicians

NEENAH — They have finally arrived. But even after a good two year waiting period, Shattuck and Armstrong music students still won't have an opportunity to parade their new uniforms until this fall.

Although delivery was supposed to coincide with a May spring concert, students found they would have to utilize the school's uniforms of 14 years one more time.

Ordered earlier this spring from the Ostwald Uniform Co., Staten Island, N.Y., delivery was delayed until late June because of a material shortage.

Two years ago, when Armstrong High School opened up, the old set of uniforms had to serve both high schools, said Leroy Goldbeck, a past president of the Neenah Music Parents' organization.

So the organization decided to begin raising the necessary funds to buy new uniforms, said Goldbeck. It was also decided that the new uniforms would not be just "band" uniforms, but uniforms that could in addition serve both the orchestra and chorus units of Armstrong and Shattuck.

In the past, the organization had only held annual candy sales in order to purchase any needed musical equipment and to send students to summer music camps. This year the organization was able to send 45 students to camp, according to Mrs. Richard Petersen, outgoing president.

To raise money for the new uniforms, a committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Brezina, initiated two fall pizza drives, manned by both students and parents. The sale of about 13,000 homemade pizzas yielded about $9,000.

In addition, a committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. J. James Davis obtained donations from about 100 local businesses, industries, and private individuals. The names of those who donated funds are printed inside many of the uniform coats.

In all, about $12,000 was raised by the organization over a two-year span.

"At first we hoped to raise the whole amount ourselves," Goldbeck said.

E. College sewer work almost done

Sanitary sewer installation along E. College Avenue is expected to be completed this week, leaving the street ready for reconstruction between Drew and Rankin streets beginning Aug. 15.

The department of public works also announced that asphalt paving will begin today with the city street division doing preparatory work on Dennison and Lee streets and Telulah Avenue. Placing of pavement is expected to begin next week.

When the contractor has completed the E. College Avenue sanitary sewer replacement this week, he will begin installation of sanitary sewer along Superior Street north of the Washington Street intersection.

Other public works projects continuing throughout the city this week include:

— The reconstruction of part of the retaining wall along E. South River Street. The detour of traffic on Lincoln and Jefferson streets will continue.

— Sanitary sewer and watermain installation will continue on the three streets north of Johnston School on the southeast side of the city.

— The contractor will continue installation of sanitary sewer under the U. S. 41 right-of-way on the northeast side in a project designed to serve the new Aid Association for Lutherans headquarters.

— Concrete street paving will take place on the second half of Weiland Avenue, Harding Drive and Hanson Drive and Berry Drive south of the Calumet Street intersection. The contractor will also be working at various intersections along the project.

— On the northwest side of the city, sanitary and water services will be installed in the undeveloped lots of the Gauthier subdivisions.

— Sidewalk construction will take place on the north side of the river during the coming week.

house' delivery," Ridgely wrote in a letter to Carson.

The newly elected 20th Ward alderman also said it is misleading to cite cost and efficiency factors in trying to justify the current regulations.

He said it is "inconsistent and self-serving argument to use the economics of labor costs as a rationale for the implementation of a policy which requires the purchase and maintenance of a fleet of $3,000 cars, especially in light of current gasoline prices."

Carson said the average cost of postal service labor is $6.26 per hour, and that the quicker delivery resulting from curblines drops in less dense areas cuts down on this cost.

Carson also said that the implementation of postal regulations can be flexible, and local postal authorities can make modifications.

Ridgely said he is investigating the possibility of getting less stringent curblines requirements for Appleton. Appleton Postmaster Richard Michaels was not available for comment today.

"Coming on the heels of a 25 per cent increase in first class postage rates, this policy is additionally insulting to the residents of a newly developed area," wrote Ridgely.

The alderman said he knows of instances where postmen left doors of curblines boxes open during the winter, "allowing snow and water inside the box only to solidly freeze the mail to the box."

He also cited occasions where packages too large to fit in the box were left leaning against the post, hanging from the box or on top of the box.

Ridgely said he was not sure what the rules were before the latest were initiated by the U. S. Postal Service, but he said they would allow for more home delivery in newly developed areas.

Heat puts crack in 41 pavement

A section of pavement on U.S. 41 at French Road buckled from the day's heat Sunday afternoon, slowing down traffic and causing some inconvenience.

There were no reports of accidents or injuries resulting from the broken pavement.

The state division of highways repaired the highway in a few hours and traffic was moving smoothly by 6 p.m.

Board of review re-elects officers

The Appleton Board of Review elected officers and scheduled the date for its first review session today.

Harry Kositzke was re-elected chairman and Vern Cornelius was re-elected vice chairman. The board decided to begin hearing assessment complaints Oct. 7.

The board was required by state statute to meet today, but, like every other year, adjourned to a later date to begin considering appeals. Assessor George Schwarzbauer is in the midst of a city-wide reassessment.

Large dinner slated Monday

A campaign fund-raising dinner for state Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, a Republican candidate for attorney general, will be next Monday at the Country-Aire Club, 2311 W. Spencer St., Appleton.

Cocktails at 6 p.m. will be followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, at $10 each, are available from Republican county chairmen or from Appleton attorney James Long, who is on Lorge's campaign committee.

New standards . . .

cover five new educators and transportation costs.

Little Chute, too, will have additions to comply with the special education law. The administration has hired two teachers for learning disabilities and is cooperating with Kaukauna, Freedom and Kimberly on another program.

Most of their budget increases will be responsible for covering salaries.

Appleton has added three instructors in the area of emotionally disturbed for the fall term.

Some of the administrators in the five school districts also mentioned that new people were hired to cover such areas as physical education, art and music, plus health education, but most prefer to wait with their comments until the standards are spelled out more clearly.

"If they remain as they are now, which in most cases is broad enough to give us some leeway, we will be fine. The smaller districts may be hurting," one of the superintendents summed it up for the bigger districts.

The schools have to meet two-thirds of the requirements by this fall and the total package by 1975.

The 12 remaining standards are:

— Each school district must certify annually that every professional staff member is properly certified by DPI for the position for which he or she is hired.

— Each district will have to certify annually that every full-time teacher is paid at least the minimum salary and granted the sick leave specified in the state statutes.

— The district board will have to set up a procedure for which administrators and teachers formulate a long-range inservice plan and operate an annual inservice program for all certified staff people.

— The district will have to identify and diagnose "underachieving and potential underachieving students in reading in K-3." This identification will have to be done by people trained specifically for that purpose.

It further states that these children with the deficiencies will have to have instruction and services directed to specifically for correcting the deficiencies.

However, the services will have to be coordinated with all other reading instruction, including the involvement of parents, the standard dictates.

— Each school district will have to make available to all five-year-olds a kindergarten program. (Up to now, this was a rule which the districts had to follow for integrated or higher aids).

In addition, the teachers will have to be certified by DPI in order to teach in this level.

Physical facilities, equipment and materials to teach basic concepts and skills in language arts, fine arts, social studies, sciences, mathematics and physical education, will have to be provided.

— The school district's guidance and counseling services will have to include vocational education, pupil appraisal program, placement services, referrals and follow-up provisions.

DPI has gone further and stated that there will have to be written evidence that the program is systematically planned, implemented and evaluated. In addition, the guidance counselors will have to be certified by DPI.

— The school year will run 180 full days, as it is now. But a day on which parent-teacher conferences are held for the equivalent time of a regular school day may be counted as one day, "if the district has a written policy requiring students to attend such conferences."

— Emergency nursing service will have to be provided by a nurse registered in Wisconsin. The district will also have to arrange with a physician to serve as medical advisor for the nursing service.

— The district will have to provide library services under the supervision of "appropriately certified" library or audio-visual personnel.

The district will also have to have on file a written school board approved long-range plan for library services development formulated by the administrator, teachers and library personnel as well as students.

— A long-range plan also will have to be developed in the facility area, "to bring all facilities up to safety and health standards."

The standards go on to spell out the requirements in four areas — health education, physical education, art instruction and music — which have traditionally been the ones that have suffered when the budget has to be chopped.

In the area of health instruction, one of the most abused areas in most curriculums, the standards state that "a professional staff member will be designated as coordinator of health education." It further adds that health instruction at the elementary level will be the responsibility of the classroom teacher, but "a minimum of one structured course will have to be taught by a certified health education teacher in each senior high school," with time allocated "consistent with other subjects."

All school districts will also be ordered to implement a "developmental, sequential, comprehensive physical education curriculum for all students."

Instruction for elementary school students will be conducted daily by a certified teacher in the field. The course may be elective, however, at the 12th grade level if a curriculum based on "Lifetime Sports" is offered at the 11th grade level.

What the standards on health and physical education do is separate the two areas, basically, for better instruction. In many cases, districts have used physical education instructors to teach health programs, and many times, DPI has felt the health education has suffered.

Art and music, the two fine arts areas, also have suffered in the past when budgets become tight. These, too, are covered under the new set of standards.

"Art instruction will be provided in accordance with a written comprehensive art curriculum which is based on concepts developed through sensory awareness, aesthetic discrimination and skill development."

What is more, it will have to be provided for all students and will be under the direct supervision of an art teacher certified by DPI.

Music programs will also have to have a written curriculum which meets the approval of DPI. Included in the program will be singing, playing instruments, listening, movement, and music reading.

Condition critical

MANAWA — An Osseo, Minn., man who was kicked in the head by a horse here Saturday was listed in critical condition this morning at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, where he was taken after the incident.

Roger Kilness was competing in the bareback bronc riding division at the 16th annual Mid-Western Rodeo and was thrown from the horse. One of its hooves struck him in the head, knocking him unconscious.

He was taken to New London Community Hospital in a private auto, with an escort from the Waupaca County Police, and later transferred to the hospital at Neenah.

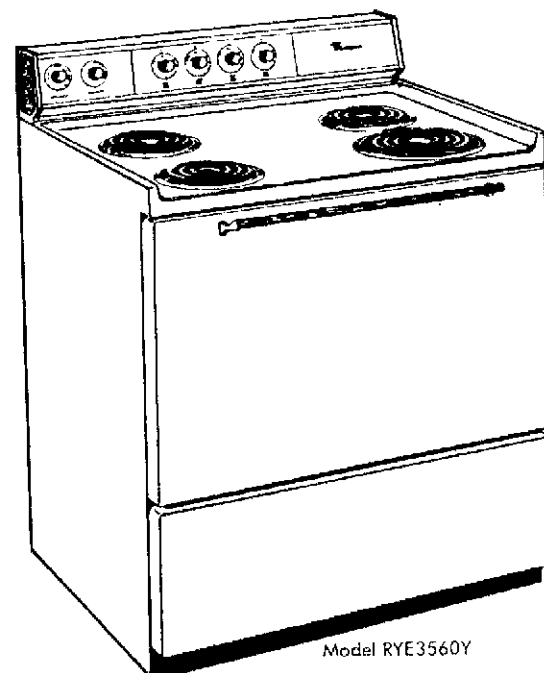

At the time of the accident, the Manawa Rescue Squad was at the high school, administering to five Sheboygan youths who were overcome by heat. The squad also made four other runs during the rodeo's afternoon performance.

What now in Argentina

Maybe it is sort of retribution Juan Peron, who was able to mesmerize Argentines for many years in great part because of the popularity of his second wife, Evita, has been succeeded by this third wife, Maria Estela Isabel.

But the new President of Argentina, elected as vice president in a team candidacy with her husband in 1973, does not seem much like Evita on the surface. There may be more similarity than is obvious.

Eva was an actress before her marriage in 1945 to Peron. While she helped tremendously in his appeal to the des camadas or shirtless ones, there was something more than a bit of the dictator about her. She was not at all averse to using her devotion to the Catholic Church to increase her influence with devout Argentines — and possibly get a little Church support for her husband's government, too. The adulation given her when she died of cancer in 1952 was close to that for a real saint.

Maria Estela Isabel has been closely linked to the more conservative wing of the greatly split Peronist movement. Her influence this last year may have been responsible for the obvious move of Juan Peron to criticize the young radicals in his party. However, that also probably was simply the result of differences in age and problems. What was radical in 1950 could easily be conservative today.

Emotion and memory have served to unite Argentines behind Peron in his death. But there is little encouragement that his widow, now President, will be able to hold that unity for long.

We learn about Russian television

The differences between the United States and other nations with traditions of democratic rule and the more restrictive regimes was no where better demonstrated than on recent Russian television.

American commentators dared to use as news the fact that a prominent Soviet scientist was on a hunger strike, protesting his commitment to a hospital. But Russian TV technicians have quick fingers on the cut-off buttons and they probably were particularly alert when the newsmen were Americans covering President Nixon's visit. The screens all over — not merely Russian but those activated from satellites around the world — simply went blank.

No matter that some people in the Nixon Administration must regard the Russians with envy. How sweet it would have been to be able to render blank John Dean testifying before the Senate Watergate committee! And all those facts and figures, not to mention the interpretations, of the President's delinquent taxes.

But the truth is that American television sets did not go blank, except when individuals turned them off in their own homes. And therein lies a world of difference that all the summit meetings, wise as they may be and contributing to world harmony, will not change one whit.

Another summit meeting

There was another summit meeting of sorts at the same time President Nixon and Party Chairman Brezhnev were holding their conferences at Yalta. Surface agreements but little in the way of the nitty gritty apparently were accomplished at both.

Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan went to Bangladesh — which was part of Pakistan until its successful war of secession — to meet with Prime Minister Shiek Mujibur Rahman. Reportedly the welcome for Bhutto, including the strong embrace, was much warmer than his sendoff.

The prime ministers met twice for formal talks about their problems which grew from the civil war and the neglect of Bangladesh up to that time by what was West Pakistan. They include some 500,000 Biharis in Bangladesh who probably ought to be living in the West and assets in Pakistan which Bangladesh wants in Dacca. Then there are joint liabilities, running about $6 million, which both sides would like the other to accept. Dr. Kamal Hossain, Bangladesh Foreign Minister, said that Pakistan had retained control of all deposits with foreign banks, gold reserves and credits with the International Monetary Fund and took all movable assets such as civilian aircraft and ships as well. The difficulties in reaching a percentage agreement on the monetary matters are considerable. Bangladesh, then East Pakistan, was the poor relative which probably didn't have much in the way of property that could be attributed to it.

"We are disappointed that a great opportunity has been missed in taking a giant step forward in reconciliation," the Foreign Minister said. But part of the disappointment reflects Bangladesh's inability so far to get things all together and the too high expectations of the Bengalis.

The war at least is over. Shiek Mujib has accepted an invitation from Mr. Bhutto to hold further conferences in Pakistan and they will take place at "an appropriate time."

Sometimes the mere fact of meeting is in itself enough of an accord.

Civil corruption

The conviction of a former city officer of Monroe in southern Wisconsin for accepting bribes from an agent of a chemical company whose sold materials to the city sewage department brings to a shameful total of 28 the number of successful prosecutions on similar charges in Wisconsin communities during the last year.

The prosecutions result from a John Doe investigation of procurement practices begun by the state department of justice and will probably tend to bring support to the suggestion of Attorney General Warren that the state should establish a permanent unit to audit the procurement methods of constituent local governments.

There is cause here for some serious reflection about the common assumption that such betrayals of public trust happen only in other jurisdictions and that the community of Wisconsin public officeholders and politicians is a kind of hound's tooth club.

We have had, indeed, cause for some pride in the superior ethical standards Wisconsin as a whole has upheld for so many years. Perhaps the fact that some of our servants in places of public trust have been shown to be weak is a reflection of the changing moral atmosphere of American society on the whole. What we cannot afford is the impression that the people are complacent.

Vigilant auditing of public affairs, and determined prosecution of serious transgressions must be accepted as routine, even as the bribe giver must be punished as relentlessly as the bribe taker.

Public employees seeking early retirement

MADISON — Over the years millions of critical words have been written about the influence of lobbies on the Wisconsin legislative process, usually with disparaging purpose. The "lobby" in the typical vocabulary is the equivalent of a "special interest," and therefore hostile to the public interest.

What has not often been made clear is that the image of the skulking, sinister creature with a purse intended to buy votes unethically is virtually obsolete — if it ever had validity in Wisconsin.

The big lobbies today are those with attentive, responsible and sophisticated constituencies, and their rank and influence is adjusted with changing times.

The other day the press wires carried a brief notice suggesting that the first tentative steps are being taken in the legislature to provide more generously for the massive public employee establishment, specifically in a proposal to permit the typical public employee to retire with full benefits at the age of 62, no other questions asked.

Editors should have "played" the tentative discussions more prominently, for the public employee interest is now by all odds the most influential in the Wisconsin legislative process and the retirement benefit schedule an enormous and steadily growing liability of the public purse.

The other day the labor market bulletin matter-of-factly reported that there were 282,200 government employees in the state at last count. Some are federal civil servants. But the vast majority are employed by state and local governments. Their numbers are increasing, as they have increased steadily during almost every recent year, for all of the talk about productivity emphasis in the civil service ranks, "austerity" and the rest.

In only two of the major categories of jobs measured by the state labor statisticians are there more persons. Retail trade exceeds the total, but by a slight margin. Manufacturing counted 536,000 employees for the same period.

Those civil servants represent one-sixth of the total of non-farm wage and salary earners in the state. Mostly they are better educated, more politically aware, and better organized for political objectives. Members of the legislature who are inclined to stand up to the public employee lobby pressure on major objectives can be counted on two hands.

Even the professed fiscal conservative, counting the public employee families in a district with a big state institution, or the aggregate of the local payroll names in his neighborhood, tends to get the message when expert agents of the public employee unions stand ob-servantly on the edge of the chamber.

The agents of the public service unions are patient, skilled and rarely get much public notice — unlike those who espouse the goals of commercial and private clients.

They cite tables showing that the Wisconsin civil servant retirement system is conservative, when measured against other states. Little is said about the demonstrable fact that it is more generous than that which covers the vast majority of employees in Wisconsin private enterprise — as are other auxiliary benefits that go with a civil service pay check, tenure, leave privileges, insurance packages, etc.

The civil service pressures get comparatively little notice, perhaps because statehouse reporters are discouraged by the esoteric tone of the "study committees" that are forever deliberating and tend to be dominated by the civil servant interest. The formula proposals are so complex as to defy the non-specialist.

The law has already been changed to permit for the first time post-retirement benefit increases. Coupled with the drive for earlier retirement and an evidently irrevocable expansion of the public service job market, here is one of the formidable challenges that looms for lawmakers.

Hecklers seldom have the final word

In my salad days, when I was as green in judgment as a lettuce leaf, I used to enjoy attending public lectures given by eminent men. I would listen carefully for an apparent inconsistency or contradiction, and then try to trip them up in the question period.

I never succeeded with a skillful and experienced speaker, and soon learned that the heckler has an immense disadvantage—because the man on the platform always gets in the last lick.

Since then I have appeared on hundreds of platforms myself and have often been subjected to the same kind of brash young questioner. I once was. But even when they happen to be right, and I am wrong, they don't have a chance against a veteran joust, and they can always be made to look mean or foolish.

Some years ago I was on a public-health panel at a college symposium. One of the panel members was introduced as "Dr. Brown." At the question period a youth stood up and inquired with barely veiled contempt, "Isn't it true that you are a veterinarian, Dr. Brown?" The doctor smiled sweetly. "Yes," he replied. "Are you ill?"

This reminded me of the time Will Rogers was to speak at a political rally in California, presided over by the governor, who was taken ill. The lieutenant governor was hastily summoned to take his place, and in a mistaken effort to seem funny, or superior, he introduced Rogers with the words:

"I'll try not to make any jokes, because I'm about to call on the biggest joke in California. Like all conceited actors, he is, I see, whispering to his companion instead of listening and trying to learn something."

Rogers stood up and responded, "It's true I was whispering to the lady next to me and I apologize. I asked her, 'Who is that man talking?' And she said, 'I don't know.' And then she turned and asked the man next to her, and he turned and asked the lady next to him and then—well, it had to go all the way down the table and back again before we found out."

"That's why it made such a disturbance. And what does the lieutenant governor do?" I asked her. Oh, he doesn't do anything," she said. "Doesn't he even get up in the morning?" I asked. "Oh yes," she said, "he gets up every morning and inquires whether the governor is any worse."

Perhaps the finest rostrum retort was given by Leonard Bacon. When he had finished speaking at a theological conference, a man jumped up and cried, "Why, I never heard of such a thing in my life!"

Mr. Moderator," said Bacon. "I cannot allow my opponent's ignorance, however vast, to offset my knowledge, however limited."

President has let Soviet insult U.S.

Secretary General Leonid Brezhnev seems to have taken over James S. Clair's role as President Nixon's chief defender. I personally got quite a charge out of Brezhnev's nasty side shot at those of us in the United States who are skeptical of détente. I'm trying to figure out what Nixon's pay off to him will be. Perhaps he will name Alger Hiss Ambassador to Moscow?

But besides being amused I am quite infuriated by what seems to me an American President in sackcloth and ashes turning up in Moscow as a virtual penitent. Soviet propaganda has never ceased to emphasize the point that the "imperialist" United States launched the Cold War and was responsible for the nasty relations between the two superpowers over the last quarter of a century. Yet here we behold the spectacle of the Soviet leader in a quite patronizing fashion issuing a commentary of American domestic politics without any retort from the American President. In a comparably mild paraphrase of Brezhnev, Mr. Nixon could have responded, "There is no need for me to dwell on the strong feelings the American people have about the actions our Soviets have taken against Jews and dissenters since Secretary Brezhnev knows better than we do the nature of world opinion on the subject."

Pleased by Soviet slap

Moreover it is customary for speeches such as those Brezhnev and Nixon delivered at the initial banquet to be exchanged in advance and a strong presidential protest would doubtless have led Brezhnev to drop the section. One can only conclude that Mr. Nixon was privately pleased by the Soviet slap at Henry Jackson. George Meany and others who (in the secretary's words) "oppose international détente, who favor whipping up the arms race, and returning to the methods and mores of the Cold War."

To put it in a broader perspective what Brezhnev did was put the onus for the Cold War on certain "American circles" (to use a common phrase not included in his speech) and congratulated President Nixon for his miraculous conversion from this reactionary ideological ambience. This is not the time or place to review the elaborate historical argument that we were responsible for betraying a trusting, barefoot Josef Stalin and destroying wartime unity. Suffice it to say that had American "ruling circles" in World War II contemplated betraying the alliance, they would have abandoned the demand for "unconditional surrender" and made a separate peace with Germany on the condition that the Nazis be removed from power.

To return to the main point there also seemed to be a conspiracy between the American and Soviet leaders to blot out the memory of the Yom Kippur War.

Brezhnev "That is why we believe that the good results it has proved possible to achieve in Soviet-American relations during the last two years shall not be erased."

Nixon "We have moved in these two years from confrontation to coexistence to cooperation." Later in the week the President went to great lengths to emphasize that it was his "personal" relationship with Brezhnev that made all the difference.

Accessory to attempted murder

Now I am quite aware that you don't rise at a state banquet and throw hand grenades. Yet there surely was no need for Mr. Nixon to lay it on with a trowel. The fact is that nine months ago the Soviet Union was an accessory to the attempted murder of Israel, an American ally. The fact is that Brezhnev betrayed Nixon by heating up the Middle East situation by loading the Arab arsenal, by urging over Radio Moscow (in Arabic) two weeks before the war that détente had crippled any American capacity to rescue Israel by calling on Algeria and Tunis and other Arab states to join the attack, by encouraging the oil embargo and, last but not least, by threatening direct military intervention if the Israelis did not let the Third Egyptian Corps out of the trap east of the Suez Canal.

This my friends is evidence to Mr. Nixon that we have moved from confrontation to coexistence to cooperation! The conversation I would give a million rubles to have overheard was between Brezhnev and his cronies, collars open, feet up, drinks in hand, as Air Force One headed west. The analogy that comes to mind is a joyous celebration by a group of hustlers who have just sold a country boy the Brooklyn Bridge.

Oshkosh band serenades Editor Ryan

The Crescent, July 4, 1874.

On Friday evening last we were the recipients of a pleasant musical serenade by the Oshkosh Cornet Band, which was in town attending the Preparatory Exhibition, and at the close of which the gentlemen comprising this excellent band numbered our residence among others called upon during the moonlight night so appropriate for the soft, mellow, and charming musical notes so ably discussed on that occasion. It is a most excellent banding in ability, far exceeding our most sanguine expectations. Gentlemen, accept our warmest thanks for the handsome compliment paid us.

Veteran crosses picket line

"Look, I don't even want a rookie to get a head start on me," said Larry Eaglin, first member of the National Football League Players Association to cross his union's picket line.

Eaglin, a second-year cornerback, defied the NFLPA and joined some 100 rookies and free agents in the Houston Oilers' first workout on Sunday. "It was one of the hardest decisions I've ever had to make," he said.

"I love football," added Eaglin, who wasn't scheduled to report until July 13 with other veterans of the team that has had the NFL's worst record the past two seasons. "It's my profession and I feel I've got an obligation to myself and my family first. People ask who will a strike hurt first, the owners or the players association. I don't think the owners will suffer because many of them are millionaires—and really, I don't think it will hurt the players association, either."

The strike of NFL veterans went into its second week today with picket lines up at four training camp sites and the chief negotiator for the 26 club owners saying he is ready to sit down at the bargaining table again with the players association.

John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, said no sessions are currently scheduled, but a call from federal mediators "could come at any time."

Although several veterans—among them center Jim Langer, tight end Jim Mandich and linebacker Bob Matheson of the world champion Miami Dolphins and linebacker Mike Curtis of the Baltimore Colts—have said they will report to training camp, the 6-foot-3 Eaglin became the first experienced player to actually cross the picket line in this strike.

In New York, Thompson told The Associated Press a statement Sunday from Bill Curry, president of the NFLPA, that the union would negotiate the so-called "freedom issues" is a "good sign."

Curry, at the Oiler camp in Huntsville, Tex., insisted, however, that his statement contained nothing new.

Curry, claimed the owners wouldn't discuss the freedom issues but Thompson said, "We're willing to talk changes."

The NFLPA went on strike last Monday with the battle cry "No Freedom, No Football." The union has 63 demands, among them the freedom issues which call for elimination of the reserve and option clauses, waiver system and the so-called Rozelle rule, which allows Commissioner Pete Rozelle to order compensation for a club when one of its athletes plays out his option and signs with another team.

Matheson became the third Dolphin veteran to announce he would defy the NFLPA pickets, saying on Sunday, "I just don't agree with the issues."

He said he didn't "want to sound pro management or anything else, it's just the way I feel and I'm the guy who has to make the decision."

There was another weekend defector from the NFLPA, but it wasn't clear whether he would cross the picket lines. Veteran tackle Ralph Neely of the Dallas Cowboys disclosed he had resigned from the union.

"It's a personal thing," said the 30-year-old veteran, who recently signed a long-term contract.

Packer veterans plan to picket on Wednesday

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer veterans plan to picket the scheduled start of practice for rookies here Wednesday as part of the National Football League players' strike, tackle Dick Himes said Sunday.

Nonveterans are to report to Packer training camp headquarters at St. Norbert College for physical examinations Tuesday night. But Himes, in charge of strike strategy here while Packer center and player representative Ken Bowman is involved in the movement in Chicago, said he doubted picket lines would form here until Wednesday.

"It hasn't been decided yet when we'll begin picketing Wednesday," Himes said. "We (Packer veterans) have another meeting scheduled before that."

Himes said 15 to 35 players and wives were expected to picket here. The first workout for rookies and free agents is set at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the Oneida Street practice field across from Lambeau Field.

Himes discounted rumors the drills might be moved inside Lambeau Field to avoid a confrontation with pickets.

"I think it would be kind of ridiculous," Himes said. "It would ruin the field. Besides, this isn't a lockout like it was four years ago. If any veteran wanted to walk into the field, I don't know what they'd do about it."

Head Coach and General Manager Dan Devine said no one has discussed a move inside Lambeau Field with him.

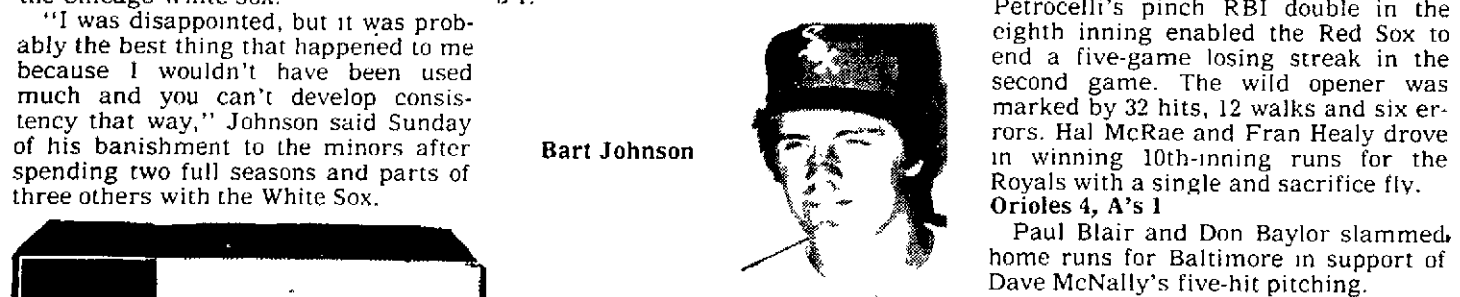

"We'll start in a different dormitory this year because we had to move from the one we were in halfway through camp last year, but otherwise we aren't planning any changes," he said.

Bart Johnson in top form

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN

Being sent to the minors was a good thing for Bart Johnson but his return to the majors could be even better for the Chicago White Sox.

"I was disappointed, but it was probably the best thing that happened to me because I wouldn't have been used much and you can't develop consistency that way," Johnson said Sunday of his banishment to the minors after spending two full seasons and parts of three others with the White Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians trimmed the California Angels 6-2, the Boston Red Sox snapped a five-game losing streak by defeating Kansas City 5-3 after the Royals took the doubleheader opener 11-9 in 10 innings, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Oakland A's 4-1, the Milwaukee Brewers downed the Minnesota Twins 8-5 but dropped the nightcap 5-3 in 11 innings and the Texas Rangers edged the New York Yankees 3-2.

Johnson allowed a home run to Norm Cash in the second inning, struck out nine and retired 20 batters in a row before Mickey Stanley singled in the ninth.

Indians 6, Angels 2
Home runs by John Ellis, George Hendrick and Oscar Gamble in the eighth inning powered the red-hot Cleveland Indians and Jim Perry over the hapless Angels.

Royals 11-3, Red Sox 9-5
Dwight Evans' sacrifice fly and Rico Petrocelli's pinch RBI double in the eighth inning enabled the Red Sox to end a five-game losing streak in the second game. The wild opener was marked by 32 hits, 12 walks and six errors. Hal McRae and Fran Healy drove in winning 10th-inning runs for the Royals with a single and sacrifice fly.

Orioles 4, A's 1
Paul Blair and Don Baylor slammed home runs for Baltimore in support of Dave McNally's five-hit pitching.

Rangers 3, Yankees 2
A two-out error by New York first baseman Chris Chambliss opened the gates for three unearned Texas runs in the third inning, which proved enough.

Foxes triumph, duel Waterloo for lead

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN
Post-Crescent sports editor

Kevin Bell, must rank as one of the most apt pupils White Sox Hitting Coach "Deacon" Jones has ever dealt with.

Jones has been with the Appleton Foxes for two days, helping the players — especially Bell, who had been struggling a bit, at the .256 level — with their hitting. In that brief span, Bell has socked four hits — including two homers — in seven trips and has driven in seven runs.

Sunday afternoon, the Chisox' No. 1 draft choice powered the Foxes to a 6-2 victory over Cedar Rapids, with a 3-run homer, a run-scoring single and an RBI double. Bell also scored the sixth, and final, run on a single by Mike Wolf.

The win boosted the revitalized Foxes back into a share of the Northern Division, Midwest League, lead with Waterloo. At 7:30 p.m. today, at Goodland Field, the Foxes and the Royals will battle for the undisputed lead.

While Bell took care of the stickwork at sultry Goodland Field yesterday, the Appleton pitching was in the capable hands of Dave Sandoval and Pete Buckovich. Sandoval, in notching his sixth win in eight decisions, worked the first six innings, yielding seven hits and no walks. Only the Cedar Rapids fourth proved troublesome, as the Astros strung together four singles after two out for their only runs of the game.

The hard-throwing Vuckovich logged the save by overpowering the Astros on 1-hit, 5-strikeout pitching in the final three frames.

A 2-out explosion in the first inning put the Foxes ahead to stay. Mike Ondina singled to center and moved up on Larry Walters' walk. Bell then tagged Brewers run out of 'Murphy Magic'

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tom Murphy, whose emergence as the Milwaukee Brewers' relief ace has been one of the surprises of the major league baseball season, finally ran out of magic.

Murphy relieved Jim Colborn in the ninth inning of the first game of Sunday's doubleheader and preserved an 8-5 Brewers' victory. He was summoned again in the 11th of the nightcap with the score tied 3-3, but the Minnesota Twins tagged him for three hits and two runs to win 5-3.

Luiz Gomez, a reserve infielder batting .183, started the 11th with a single, took second on an infield out and scored the decisive run when Steve Brye's long drive to left skipped off the top of John Briggs's glove and hit the wall for a double.

Bobby Darwin, who had staked the Twins to a 3-0 lead with a two run homer in the first and an RBI single in the fifth, singled home Brye with an insurance run. Tom Burgmeier, owner of a 6.17 earned run average when he became the fifth Twins' of the game in the 10th, retired the Brewers on three pitches in the 11th to square his record at 2-2.

The split marred a milestone for the Brewers' Don Money, who fielded five chances without an error in the doubleheader to set a major league record for consecutive errorless games by a third baseman in one season.

Money has yet to make an error this year in 78 games. Rico Petrocelli of Boston set the old mark of 77 from June 8 through Aug. 29, 1971. The mark for consecutive errorless games by a third baseman over more than one season is 97 by Jim Davenport of San Francisco from July 29, 1966, through April 28, 1968.

The Twins said Murphy appeared to be throwing as well in the nightcap as he had when he finished each of the Brewers' three victories in the five game series. Minnesota hitters had touched him for only two hits and no runs over 3 1-3 innings until their rally in the nightcap.

"I didn't get good wood on that ball I hit," Brye said. "He threw me a good fast ball, up and in, and I got just enough on it."

"I thought Murphy was throwing good, but luck is a big part of this game," Twins' Manager Frank Quilici said. "We got lucky, finally, I guess, but if you face a guy enough times you should eventually get to him."

The Brewers scored in the fifth on a triple by Bobby Mitchell and a sacrifice fly by John Vukovich, then gained a 33 tie in the seventh after loading the bases on pinch hit singles by Bob Hansen and Tim Johnson and a walk. Mike Hegan drove in one run with a sacrifice fly and George Scott singled home the other.

Brewer starter Clyde Wright, coming back after having pitched four innings Friday night, shut out the Twins from the sixth until Murphy took over for the 11th.

"Murph has been pitching good, but you can't get them out all the time," Brewer Manager Del Crandall said. "We played well, but we've had too many well pitched games by Wright get away from us. There's been at least four and maybe five games this year where he's held teams to three runs or under and we've lost."

The Brewers, no-hit for the first six innings of the opener by Ray Corbin, rallied behind Hegan's three run double in the seventh and Darrell Porter's bases loaded triple in the eighth.

Money led off the seventh by beating out an infield hit. After two force outs, Scott and Porter walked to fill the bases and all three runners scored on Hegan's blast, erasing a 2-0 Twins' lead.

A single by Dave May, a sacrifice and a single by Robin Yount in the eighth gave the Brewers a 4-2 lead and chased Corbin. Reliever Bill Campbell filled the bases with two walks and Porter cleared them with his triple to right center.

Bob Coluccio singled in Porter to make it 8-2, but the Twins scored three times in the ninth against Colborn until Murphy retired the side. Tony Oliva's 10th homer, a bases loaded grounder by Danny Thompson and an RBI single by Darwin drove in the runs.

"I think I relaxed a little when we got the big lead," Colborn said. "On the ball Oliva hit, I wound up and the hand I was holding the ball with brushed the side of my leg as I swung my arm back. That threw the pitch off, and that's a careless thing I wouldn't have done without the big lead."

"That's no excuse for not finishing the game," he said. "I'm pretty upset with myself. It went from a good game to a mediocre one, and it's no one's"

Marshall sparks Dodgers over Expos in relief role

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

You really have to hand it to Mike Marshall. Actually, that's just what Walt Alston has been doing all year.

The dean of major league baseball managers handed the ball to the dean of major league relief pitchers again Sunday—and Marshall came through with his usual boring consistency.

Appearing in his 56th and 57th games this season, Marshall recorded his 12th and 13th saves as the Dodgers took a doubleheader from the Montreal Expos, 4-1 and 5-3.

Marshall, a strongman who recently set a record of appearing in 13 straight games, gets better with age—and competition.

"That the man is trying to get a hit off me and the other club is trying to beat me is the only incentive I need to do my best," Marshall said.

An unemotional Marshall dispatched his former teammates Sunday with cool professionalism. Marshall was traded from the Expos to the Dodgers last winter for center fielder Willie Davis.

Aaron bids Chicago farewell with HR

CHICAGO (AP) — Hank Aaron said goodbye to beloved Wrigley Field Sunday but not without giving the fans another look at his specialty — the home run.

Aaron walloped the 725th of his career as a crowd of 28,409 gave him a standing ovation. Still, it failed to help the Atlanta Braves who dropped a 4-3 decision to the Cubs in their final Chicago appearance of the season.

Aaron's homer lifted the Braves into a 1-1 tie in the top of the fourth but Bill Madlock broke it with his fifth homer in the bottom of the fourth and Rick Monday's two-run homer in the seventh proved to be the winning blow.

The homer was Aaron's 12th of the season and his 50th in Wrigley Field, more than he has hit in any other park except his home fields in Milwaukee and Atlanta.

"I had a good feeling it was gone when it hit the bat," said Aaron. "It's a little tough thinking of your last game in Chicago because the fans, the media and everybody else has been so great to me."

It was also the 87th homer by Aaron off Cub pitching but he'll have another shot at adding to that figure since the Cubs have a three-game series in Atlanta next week.

Monday's 12th homer gave the Cubs a 4-2 lead and Rick Reuschel, 8-6, came within one out of pitching a complete game. However, when Ralph Garr singled home a run with two out in the ninth, Manager Whitey Lockman summoned reliever Horacio Pina to face pinch batter Ivan Murrell.

Lockman told Pina "Don't give this guy a fast ball or he'll hit it 500 feet."

Apparently, Lockman didn't get through to Pina who shook off catcher Steve Swisher's call for a curve and fed Murrell a fast ball. Fortunately for the Cubs, Lockman's guess was 145 feet off.

Murrell slammed the ball to the 355-foot mark where Billy Williams made a leaping catch in the vines to end the game.

Ramo Stott triumphs

SALEM, Ind. (AP) — Bobby Allison's Indiana racing luck continues—all bad. "I pulled another Indianapolis," said a disheartened Allison after lasting only two laps in Sunday's 50-mile stock car race at Salem Speedway. The Hueytown, Ala., driver referred to his 1973 Indianapolis 500 effort which also lasted two laps. Allison, a million-dollar winner on the Southern NASCAR circuit, had been the prerace favorite for the U.S. Auto Club event, but USAC regular Ramo Stott took the checkered flag. Stott, of Keokuk, Iowa, dashed into the lead on the 68th lap of the 100-lap feature when Larry Moore, who had led since the 11th circuit, dropped out. Stott averaged better than 79 miles per hour, finishing 13 seconds ahead of newcomer Bob Schippers, in his first race on high banked tracks like Salem's half-mile paved oval. Allison retired with handling problems. USAC stock car point leader Butch Hartman, who qualified on the pole with a new track record of 91.13 miles per hour, led the 20-car field through the first 10 laps. Norm Nelson edged out a fading Hartman for third. Mickey Flora led Don White to the finish for fifth. All were one lap behind Schippers and the leader. Stott, who also won the trophy dash, was expected to receive more than $3,000 for the victory out of an estimated purse exceeding $10,000. A crowd estimated at 8,000, packed the tiny Speedway.

Sue Roberts wins title

GRAND ISLAND, N.Y. (AP) — Joanne Carner's quadruple bogey-eight on the second hole was just the inspiration Sue Roberts needed to win her first Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament in six years of trying. "After we (she and her partner) saw Joanne take that eight, I just wanted to play it safe, hit all the fairways and greens and keep from three putting," the 25-year-old Columbus, Ohio, blonde said. She didn't three putt in the final round of the Niagara Frontier Classic Sunday and won it with a three-under par 70 and a 54-hole total of 213, six under par.

Mrs. Carner, co-leader with Miss Roberts and Muriel Breer going into the final round, came in with a 72 and a 215. Mrs. Breer, with a 74, was third at 217. Miss Roberts, who won $5,000 and raised her year's earnings for 16 tournaments to $14,400, feared the 15th hole most on the par-73, 6,377-yard River Oakes Golf Club course. She bogied it Friday and Saturday. Fourth place went to Sue Berning, the 1973 U.S. Women's Open champion, who had a 71 and 219. She was followed by Miss Prentice (75) and Jane Bialock (74) at 220.

INFORMAL HEARING RECONSTRUCTION APPLETON STREET AND PACIFIC STREET

Notice is hereby given that the City of APPLETON WILL HOLD AN INFORMAL HEARING AT THE First National Bank on the corner of Appleton Street and College Avenue on July 9, 1974 in regards to the reconstruction of Appleton Street and Pacific Street.

The time schedule is from 1:00 P.M. to 3:00 P.M. and 6:30 P.M. to 8:00 P.M.

Members of the Engineering Division of the City will be available during these times to answer questions and to receive the public's ideas on the project.

Run: July 5, 1974
July 8, 1974

R. G. Miller, P.E.
Director of Public Works

Your husband couldn't care less about your kitchen floor!

So...we'll help you soften him up on Solarian...the no-wax floor from Armstrong

We'll give you a "Soften Up Your Sweetie" kit that you can take home and actually sell your husband on all the features of Solarian. It's the fun and easy way to convince him to buy you that new Solarian floor you've wanted!

He'll see for himself that Solanan's the floor that shines—without waxing—far longer than an ordinary vinyl floor. You can show him how easy it is to clean its special Mirabond™ wear surface...let him wipe black heel marks off the Solarian sample! And...he'll be surprised at how affordable a Solarian floor really is! Stop in and ask for a "Soften Up Your Sweetie" kit today. You just might end up with a beautiful Solarian floor tomorrow!

List is key to historic seats

WASHINGTON (AP) A list of names on a battered yellow pad was the key to a seat today in a historic confrontation between lawyers for President Nixon and special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski before the Supreme Court.

Keeper of the list was Bruce Kaplan of Chicago, a student working in Washington for the summer who was No. 8 in line, having arrived on the scene Sunday morning.

More than 250 other persons, mainly of college age, waited with Kaplan early today in front of the building.

They kept in order by using the yellow pad list showing who had arrived first, who second, and so forth in order to be sure the first to arrive also would be the first admitted to the courtroom.

Kaplan said the list was started because they were not allowed across the street onto the court steps until around midnight Sunday and the line to enter could only be formed then.

Police took the youths across the street in groups of 10 following the order of the list and Sgt. Joseph Reid of the force guarding the court complimented their organization.

"These characters are all right," Reid remarked, scanning the long line which snaked down the steps, along a row of hedges and onto the sidewalk.

Kaplan said the list was set up by the early arrivals to "prevent a lot of pushing and shoving," and "to try and keep as orderly as possible."

Organizers of the list walked along the waiting line on the court steps with a flashlight checking those in line to prevent "crashing" and make sure those listed first got their proper places.

Kaplan said the guards at the court told him that between 50 and 100 spectator seats were available for the entire court session out of 423 spectator seats. Twenty-seven others are being used by spectators on a five-minute rotation basis. The rest of the seats have

High court hears tapes arguments

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James D. St. Clair told the Supreme Court today it is being drawn "inevitably and inexorably" into the impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

Asking the court to overturn a lower court order directing the President to produce tapes and documents sought by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski for use in the Watergate coverup trial, St. Clair said.

"No one could argue that the proceedings before this court will have no impact" on the impeachment deliberations of the House Judiciary Committee.

from Jaworski and St. Clair over whether President Nixon must surrender the material sought by the special prosecutor.

Jaworski said that he was told when he was hired as special prosecutor that "I would have the right to take the President to court."

"The special prosecutor is drawing this court into those proceedings inevitably and inexorably," St. Clair said.

Jaworski, who preceded St. Clair in the oral arguments before the court, said that if President Nixon or any president is free to rule that the Constitution "means what he says it does" without Supreme Court review, then Americans are no longer equal under the law.

And the special prosecutor said it would be particularly inappropriate to vest such power in President Nixon in a personally delicate situation involving criminal charges against two of his former closest aides and devotees, John D. Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman.

Justice Potter Stewart asked St. Clair whether he meant the court should be "stopped dead in its tracks" because the impeachment proceedings were under way.

St. Clair said he did not, but argued that impeachment itself should be left solely to the legislative branch of government as provided in the Constitution.

Some members of the House Judiciary Committee were among the hundreds in the crowded courtroom.

Jaworski consumed nearly an hour of the historic hearing presenting his opening argument and answering numerous questions from the eight justices taking part in the case.

The Supreme Court extended its 1973-74 term, originally scheduled to end late last month, to hear the arguments.

"The right to force the President to give up confidential communications — that was not delegated," St. Clair said.

He said it was Jaworski's point of view that as special prosecutor, he is a fourth entity of government when there are only three branches: the executive, legislative and judicial.

Jaworski noted that Nixon had said last November that Haldeman and Ehrlichman would "come out all right" when the proceedings are completed in the over-all Watergate case.

Add to this, he said, and I refer to it in great sorrow, the fact that a grand jury, by unanimous vote, concluded that the President is a participant in the chain of events that constituted the charged conspiracy, Jaworski said.

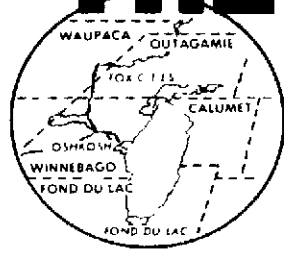

Nixon was named as an undicted co-conspirator by the grand jury that indicted Haldeman and Ehrlichman in the Watergate coverup.

One of the issues before the Supreme Court was whether the grand jury exceeded its authority in naming Nixon.

Given the circumstances of the case, Jaworski said, he would consider it a mockery "to let the President apply his construction of the Constitution without a review by his court."

St. Clair noted that the court has never confronted or resolved the boundaries of executive privilege, the doctrine of confidentiality under which Nixon claims the power to withhold subpoenaed tapes and documents.

Aged man got angry

MIAMI (AP) — An elderly man disarmed a teen-age intruder in a burst of rage and his wife killed the would-be robber.

"I was so mad I just wanted to pop him once real good in the face," said Hiram Porter, 79. "I can't remember ever being that mad before."

"It didn't take courage to wrestle with him — just mad."

Police said Porter's wife Ella, 55, killed Michael Perpall, 18, with a single shot in the chest Saturday after he broke into their cottage at a senior citizens housing project.

Porter, a retired airline employee, says he ignored his arthritic knee and wrested a rifle out of the youth's hands as they fought their way from the kitchen, through the living room and onto the front porch.

"He just came right in and bammed me with the rifle butt in the face," Porter said later as he nursed a blue swelling on one eye.

"That got me mad. I grabbed at his rifle and he held on and we just kept pulling at one another."

Porter said he managed to get the youth's rifle and toss it into the living room but the struggle continued as a crowd of neighbors gathered out front.

Mrs. Porter said she heard her husband shout for help and went running with his .22 caliber revolver. She started firing and one shot hit the youth in the chest.

Police said Perpall, on probation after two breaking and entering convictions, died less than an hour later.

"I was scared and thought he was going to kill us," Mrs. Porter said. "I wanted to stop him, not kill him."

European leaders being briefed by Kissinger

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger stopped in London today and met with British officials on prospects for channeling Arab oil money into long-term investments in Western Europe.

The high cost of petroleum and raw materials has contributed to economic instability for many of the allies.

U.S. officials said the tentative objective of Kissinger's talks with Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan is formation of an arrangement for offering attractive investment opportunities to the Arab states.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt broached the subject to Kissinger during the weekend in Munich. Kissinger flew from the West German city today.

Schmidt told newsmen that Europe's economic problems are more important than stalemated East-West negotiations on troop reductions and security measures.

The Arab oil states have been investing some of their enormous returns in European short-term bank accounts in seeking the stability of long-term investments.

The U.S. officials said a joint approach would supplement bilateral deals such as one in which the United States has undertaken to provide technological assistance to Saudi Arabia.

The American secretary of state also is briefing Callaghan, Prime Minister Harold Wilson and others on the Moscow summit meeting between President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Kissinger goes Tuesday to Madrid for the last scheduled stop on his tour to brief West European leaders on Nixon's summit trip.

In West Germany Sunday Kissinger and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt agreed in friendly talks on a wide variety of subjects including energy, currency and relations between the United States and West Germany, their spokesmen reported.

A West German spokesman said Kissinger and Schmidt agreed Sunday that the East-West European security conference in Geneva could be completed before the end of the year and if the outcome of the negotiations was satisfactory to the Western allies, it could end with the mammoth summit conference the Russians want to give it luster.

Asked if the two men talked about Watergate, the spokesman said it would be quite natural "for them to have touched on the subject. He described the talks as 'very open and friendly.'"

Kissinger's spokesman, Robert Anderson, gave no details. He said only that the two men "achieved a complete unity of views" on U.S. European relations, East-West relations, the security conference and nuclear weapons.

After their discussions, Kissinger and Schmidt watched West Germany capture the World Cup soccer championship with a 2-1 victory over the Netherlands at Munich's Olympic Stadium. If he favored the West German team, Kissinger kept it to himself.

Security was extremely tight. Sixteen German soldiers carrying submachine guns trotted alongside Kissinger's car until it stopped at the stadium entrance, and 3,000 police roamed the stadium.

Slower speeds get credit for saving lives

CHICAGO (AP) — Lowered speed limits are responsible for reducing the Fourth of July holiday traffic death toll by almost one-third, a survey of law enforcement and safety officials indicates.

While officials in some states reported somewhat less traffic than normal during the 102-hour holiday period, most of those questioned Sunday pointed to the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit as the major factor in reduced highway deaths.

"I think we're reducing the number of deaths every month that we have it and can enforce it adequately," said Col. E. W. Jones, commander of the North Carolina State Patrol.

"Speed comes shining through as the major factor," said a spokesman for the National Safety Council.

The council predicted that 450 to 550 persons would die over the four-day weekend.

The toll for the period was 519, compared with 758 in 1972, the most recent four-day Fourth of July weekend.

The reduced death toll appears "way out of proportion to the relative reduction in miles traveled," said Maj. Rich ard Lueck of the Minnesota State Patrol. "We can only conclude that the 55 m.p.h. limit is the basic factor."

Highway officials sampled at random by The Associated Press were nearly unanimous in citing reduced speeds as the major factor in the fewer traffic deaths, with some adding reduced travel because of higher gas prices as another major factor.

States contacted included Florida, Louisiana, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Massachusetts, Ohio, North and South Carolina, Connecticut, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Texas, Colorado, Arkansas, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Only Nebraska officials discounted reduced speeds and put the major emphasis on a reduction in travel.

"I don't think the speed limit really has anything to do with it. When there's no traffic, there's no fatalities," a spokesman said. That state's 11 weekend fatalities pushed the toll 5 persons over the July 3-8 period of 1973.

"We had predicted 15 billion miles would be driven over the holiday weekend — not a substantial reduction in travel (compared to 15.7 billion miles in 1972)," said National Safety Council spokesman Ron Kuykendall.

"Other factors may play a part, people may be taking fewer long high way trips. Maybe parents aren't giving teen-agers the car as much because of high gas prices," said Kuykendall.

"But speed comes shining through as the major factor in reduced deaths," he said.

"In Louisiana, we have had a 30 per cent lower highway fatality rate this year than the same period last year, and I think this has to be attributed to the lower speed limit," said Col. Donald Thibodaux, state police superintendent.

The Florida Highway Patrol said on Sunday that the death toll had reached only about half of its prediction of 31 traffic fatalities.

"The 55 m.p.h. speed limit is the whole reason for it. If it was up to 70 m.p.h., no telling how many people would be killed," a patrol spokesman said.

"The lower speed limit is apparently working in terms of saving lives and presumably doing something to save fuel," North Dakota Highway Patrol Superintendent Ralph Wood said. "But it is apparent there is extensive dissa tisfaction with the lower limits."

Wood said the percentage of motorists complying with the lowered speed limits in North Dakota is "quite low. They're not doing 80 or 90 miles an hour, but it isn't 55 m.p.h. either."

The National Safety Council says chance of survival in a crash at 50 m.p.h. is four times greater than at 70 m.p.h. and statistics indicate that 75 per cent compliance with the 55 m.p.h. limit could save 8,500 lives a year.

The 1974 Memorial Day holiday was the first long weekend since speeds were lowered nationwide, and it produced the lowest death toll for a three-day holiday since 1960.

The highway death toll was down 25 per cent during the first three months of this year, compared with 1973, followed by reductions of 22 per cent in April and 23 per cent in May, Kuykendall said.

Kuykendall said year-end figures would be studied in an attempt to determine precisely which factors figured in the total death-reduction picture.

"But I think it's safe to say that the increasing trend in traffic fatalities which we saw up through October of last year has reversed itself," he said.

Getty opens lavish home for charity

GUILDFORD, England (AP) — J. Paul Getty held open house for more than 5,000 paying guests at his stately country home, but the crowd didn't get to see him.

The American oil billionaire opened the gates of Sutton Place, his 16th century mansion 27 miles south of London, on Sunday to raise money for Guildford's disabled. Admission was $1.20. Getty permits such invasions about twice a year to benefit various charities.

The visitors inspected the Great Hall where Henry VIII once dined, fingered leatherbound volumes in the library, milled about in the hedge-bordered rose garden and lolled on the grass by the aquamarine swimming pool.

The 81-year-old lord of the manor was reported watching West Germany's televised victory over the Netherlands in the World Cup soccer final.

Normally a pack of Alsations guard the estate beside the River Wey, and signs near the gatehouse read "Beware of Fierce Dogs." But Sunday the dogs were locked up, and a subdued carnival atmosphere prevailed.

Hundreds of cars cluttered the velvety lawns. Tweedy gentlemen perched on camp stools to read the Sunday Times. Families ate picnic lunches. People lined up for more than an hour to tour the manor's Long Gallery and library with their Chippendale mirrors and intricately carved oaken chests. The visitors also saw a throne made for a Medici cardinal and a pair of crimson-velvet settees made for Louis XIV of France.

Rolls of clear plastic were put down to protect the carpets and polished oak floors.

In keeping with the surrounding countryside, the library contains such works as "The Art of Deer Stalking." But for more contemporary reading, there's Richard Nixon's "Six Crises" and a history of Shell oil operations in the United States.

Getty's personal dining room, a long hall hung with tapestries, was not open to public roaming. But a butler periodically opened a leaded window to let visitors take a peek at the 50-foot oaken table bedecked with golden candelabra and enormous silver and gold bowls.

Visit to Mar-A-Largo

President Nixon was in Palm Beach, Fla., Sunday to visit this 115-room ocean-front estate of the late Marjorie Merriweather Post, Mar-A-Largo, to inspect it as a possible guest

Zoo's Samson might take gorilla bride

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Samson, probably the most famous resident of Milwaukee's world renowned zoo, may take a bride.

The only hitches in the hitching plans, says zoo Director George Speidel, might be the size and strength of Samson, a lowland gorilla who is about 25 years old, or the personalities of the couple.

Samson is a about 6-feet, weighs more than 560 pounds and is in excellent physical condition.

But Terra, the teen-aged neighbor who might be his bride, is comparatively petite at a slim 240 pounds.

"And that's just the problem," Speidel says. "Samson is a gentle creature, but he doesn't know his own strength."

Gorillas have been bred in captivity, but Speidel says none he has seen measure up to the size, personality or showmanship of Samson, who attracts the biggest crowds at the zoo.

If zoo officials decide that the two might get along, they will probably insert a door with steel bars between their quarters. That way they can look at each other, but can't fight.

"A lot depends on their temperaments," Speidel said. "Some are mean, some docile. We don't know how these two will react to each other.

"But we will be able to tell how they communicate. If we go ahead with this introduction, we will stick with them very closely. We will study them for quite a while before deciding whether to go with the next step."

The next step would be putting the two gorillas in the same cage, although it would probably be equipped with an escape hatch just large enough for Terra, in case she gets cold feet, Speidel said.

Samson came here in 1950, but has never had a girlfriend.

UW teacher says drug charges lack foundation

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — University of Wisconsin faculty member Marion Brown said Sunday "there is no basis for the charges" that led to his indictment on a federal narcotics charge.

Brown, 35, is an associate professor of agricultural journalism and staff member of the UW Land Tenure Center in Chile. He was indicted last week with 21 others in connection with an operation that allegedly smuggled $32.7 million worth of cocaine into the U.S. from Chile since May 1973.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's no basis for the charges," he said in an interview with the Wisconsin State Journal. "I don't wish to be uncooperative, but I really am not free to discuss the matter."

He said his attorney advised him not to comment on details of the indictment.

"My position there was very delicate politically," Brown said. But he refused to speculate on any possible involvement of the Chilean government in his arrest.

"Any speculation on the part they played will be out of order at this time," he said.

His UW co-workers said during the weekend they found the indictment hard to accept.

"The charge is unbelievable, knowing Marion," Claron Burnett, chairman of the Department of Agricultural Journalism, said. "It still seems to us that it might be a mistake. Lots of people have been indicted because their names have been mentioned."

Acting U.S. Atty. Steven Underwood said Brown was charged with conspiracy to import narcotics, distribution, and possession with intent to distribute.

Brown's attorney, Donald Eisenberg of Madison, said Brown had been arrested Tuesday and released without bail.

"Most likely we'll agree to allow Mr. Brown to be removed to New York to answer the indictment" at a removal hearing here Tuesday before a federal magistrate, he said.

Brown returned to Madison from Chile last July after spending three years there as head of a research project on agrarian reform.

Lloyd Bostian, former chairman of Brown's department, said he had known Brown for the 10 years he has been at UW.

"He's well-liked by both faculty and students," Bostian said. "Marion is a very human, kind, moralistic man."

The Justice Department charged in the indictments that the smuggling ring used diplomatic pouches to import about 168 pounds of cocaine into the U.S. between May 1973 and last month.

Watergate news covered too much, poll says

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Most Americans believe the news media are devoting too much time and space to coverage of Watergate, the latest Gallup Poll shows.

Fifty-three per cent of the 1,509 adults interviewed June 21-24 said they felt newspapers, television and radio were providing "too much" coverage, 13 per cent felt there was "too little" coverage, 30 per cent believed the coverage to be just right and the remaining 4 per cent offered no opinion.

In a similar survey, conducted in June 1973, 44 per cent said Watergate coverage was in excess, 12 per cent said there was "too little" coverage, 36 per cent believed it to be "about right," and 8 per cent offered no opinion.

Those participating in both surveys were asked, "With regard to the Watergate affair, do you think the mass media — that is, newspapers, television and radio — have provided too much coverage, about the right amount, or too little?"

In the earlier survey, 31 per cent of Democrats believed media coverage was in excess, compared with 43 per cent in the current poll.

The percentage of Republicans who said Watergate coverage was "too much" increased from 66 to 75 per cent in the last year and among independents the figure increased from 43 to 51 per cent.

Crashes kill 2 residents of Valley area

Two Fox Valley area residents were killed Sunday in separate Waupaca County accidents.

They were identified as Larry D. Dean, 23, 174 S. Madison St., Clintonville, and Mrs. Anna E. Pethke, 81, route 2, Manawa.

Dean, who had injured his foot at work, was on crutches as he crossed U.S. 45 just south of Clintonville shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday. One passing car narrowly missed him, according to the Waupaca County Traffic Patrol, and as he crossed the centerline, he was struck by a car driven by Steven D. Young, 18, Prospect Street, Bear Creek.

He was taken to Clintonville Community Hospital by the volunteer rescue squad. He died at the hospital of multiple injuries.

Dean was employed at Rich's Food Products in Appleton. He lived in Clintonville, but stayed at 1493 1/2 Appleton Road, Menasha, during the week.

Mrs. Pethke was fatally injured in a near head-on crash about 11 a.m. Sunday in the intersection of State 22 and 110.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, William F. Pethke, 83, as they returned home from church services.

Also injured in that crash and taken to New London Community Hospital were William Ellenbecker, 18, Bear Creek, driver of the second vehicle, and two passengers — Judy Ellenbecker, 14, his sister, and Vicki C. Krake, 15, also of Bear Creek.

Mrs. Pethke was taken from the scene to Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, where she died about 3 p.m.

The Manawa rescue squad took the other four injured persons to New London Community Hospital. Pethke suffered a possible fractured sternum, head cuts, and complained of a sore hand. Miss Krake suffered severe face cuts, Miss Ellenbecker, face cuts and possible internal injuries, and Ellenbecker complained of chest pains and suffered a nose bleed.

According to reports, the Pethke car was traveling north on State 22, at tempting to turn onto 110 when it collided with the Ellenbecker car, southbound on 22.

The deaths of 19 other persons on Wisconsin's roads during the four-day

Fourth of July holiday period raised the state's toll to 391 for the year, compared with 530 on this date last year.

The toll was for deaths between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday. James Fink, 25, of Colby lost his life Sunday night when his motorcycle collided with a pickup truck and burst into flames on a town road near Colby in Clark County.

A three-car collision at an Oconomowoc country club entrance early Sunday killed John Grimm, 20, and Michael Bohrmann, 21, both of Oconomowoc. Grimm was driver and Bohrmann a passenger in one of the cars.

Gary N. Erickson, 25, of rural Merrill, died late Sunday afternoon when the car he was in left Wisconsin 86 at the Spirit Falls bridge and rolled over, Lincoln County authorities said.

The Barron County sheriff's office said James A. Olson, 26, of Cumberland, was killed Sunday afternoon on a town road in Crystal Lake when the car he was driving went out of control and skidded into a tractor.

Marquette County sheriff's officers said Paul Ring, 19, and Kim Wotruba, 15, both of rural Wausaukee, died late Saturday in a two-car crash along a county road near Wausaukee.

Francis Corbett, 26, of rural Portage, died Saturday night of injuries suffered Thursday when his car struck a tree along a Columbia County road.

Inquest called

A coroner's inquest will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday into the June 28 death of a 15-year-old Kaukauna girl in a single-vehicle traffic accident west of Freedom.

Julie A. Brown, 900 Laurel Lane, was driving a van that went out of control and rolled over on Vine Road, a half mile south of Outagamie County Trunk EE.

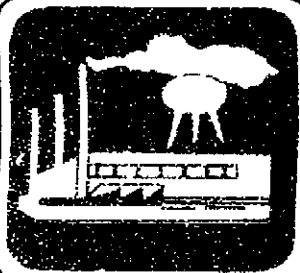

Injured in the accident were Scott Hanby, 604 W. 10th St., and Rock Gerow, 701 Dodge St., both of Kaukauna.

Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, who said he consulted with Dist. Atty. John Ensley before calling the inquest, reported that six witnesses have been ordered to appear. The inquest will be in County Court Branch 2.

New school aid plan more equal

BY MAIJA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent staff writer

The 13 standards which all school districts will have to meet by 1975 in order to receive state aids, according to the law enacted in 1973, have been published by the state Department of Public Instruction.

In effect, what this set of standards does is wipe out the two different types of state aids to school districts.

Until a couple of years ago, the school districts were eligible either for basic or integrated aids. The basic aids were available to all districts while the integrated aids were based on a taxing formula. The latter assisted those districts more which were willing to tax their people more for a better education.

That has always caused some problems in that many districts which didn't tax their communities more, simply couldn't afford to, and so received only the basic aids.

This set of standards gives every district equal opportunity and is based on an equalized formula set up by the legislature.

The 13 standards, many of which will not cause any disruptions to most school systems since they have programs set up to meet most of them already, are:

— Each school district must certify annually that every professional staff member is properly certified by DPI for the position for which he or she is hired.

— Each district will have to certify annually that every full-time teacher is paid at least the minimum salary and granted the sick leave specified in the state statutes.

— The district board will have to set up a procedure for which administrators and teachers formulate a long-range inservice plan and operate an annual inservice program for all certified staff people.

— The district will have to identify and diagnose "underachieving and potential underachieving students in reading in K-3." This identification will have to be done by people trained specifically for that purpose.

It further states that these children with the deficiencies will have to have instruction and services directed to specifically for correcting the deficiencies.

However, the services will have to be coordinated with all other reading instruction, including the involvement of parents, the standard dictates.

— Each school district will have to make available to all five-year olds a kindergarten program. (Up to now, this was a rule which the districts had to follow for integrated or higher aids).

In addition, the teachers will have to be certified by DPI in order to teach in this level.

Physical facilities, equipment and materials to teach basic concepts and skills in language arts, fine arts, social studies, sciences, mathematics and physical education, will have to be provided.

— Each district will have to operate or be a part of a cooperative program for special education and handicapped children between the ages of 3-21.

(This comes under the new law, popularly known as Chapter 89), which has caused some headaches for administrators with budget difficulties.)

— The school district's guidance and counseling services will have to include vocational education, pupil appraisal program, placement services, referrals and follow-up provisions.

DPI has gone further and stated that there will have to be written evidence that the program is systematically planned, implemented and evaluated. In addition, the guidance counselors will have to be certified by DPI.

— The school year will run 180 full days, as it is now. But a day on which parent-teacher conferences are held for the equivalent time of a regular school day may be counted as one day, "if the district has a written policy requiring students to attend such conferences."

— Emergency nursing service will have to be provided by a nurse registered in Wisconsin. The district will also have to arrange with a physician to serve as medical advisor for the nursing service.

— The district will have to provide library services under the supervision of "appropriately certified" library or audio-visual personnel.

The district will also have to have on file a written school board approved long-range plan for library services development formulated by the administrator, teachers and library personnel as well as students.

— A long-range plan also will have to be developed in the facility area, "to bring all facilities up to safety and health standards."

The standards go on to spell out the requirements in four areas — health education, physical education, art instruction and music — which have traditionally been the ones that have suffered when the budget has to be chopped.

In the area of health instruction, one of the most abused areas in most curriculums, the standards state that "a professional staff member will be designated as coordinator of health education." It further adds that health instruction at the elementary level will be the responsibility of the classroom teacher, but "a minimum of one structured course will have to be taught by a certified health education teacher in each senior high school," with time allocated "consistent with other subjects."

All school districts will also be ordered to implement a "developmental, sequential, comprehensive physical education curriculum for all students."

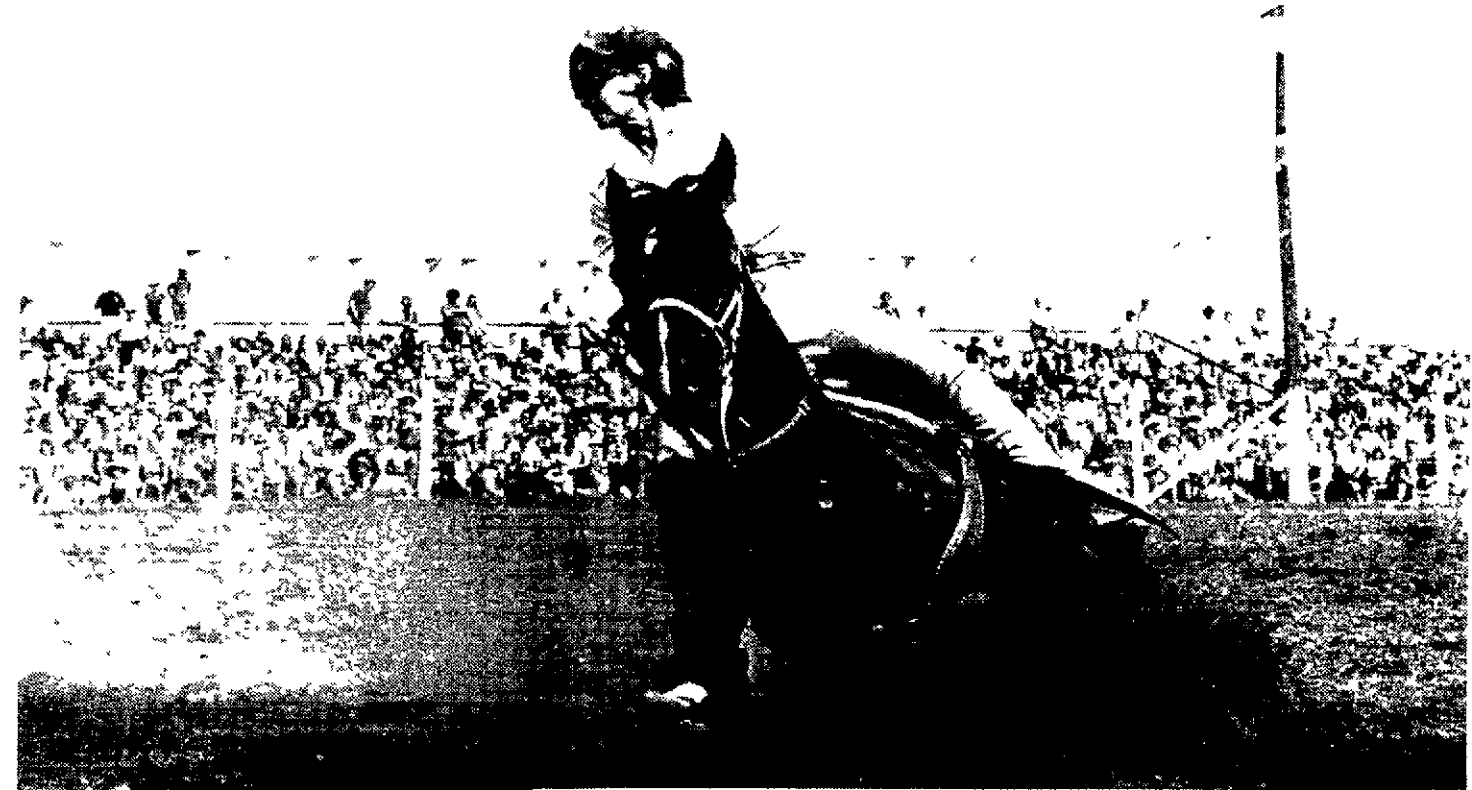

Instruction for elementary school students will be conducted daily by a certified teacher in the field. The course may be elective, however, at the 12th grade level if a curriculum based on "Lifetime Sports" is offered at the 11th grade level.

What the standards on health and physical education do is separate the two areas, basically, for better instruction. In many cases, districts have used

Courts

WAUPACA — A preliminary hearing has been set for 11 a.m. July 15 in County Court Branch 2 for a Los Angeles man charged Friday with disorderly conduct, obstructing an officer and operating a vehicle without the owner's consent.

Philbert Barley, 23, is being held in the Waupaca County jail on $1,000 bond.

Four traffic charges — driving while under the influence of an intoxicant, speeding, no valid driver's license and failure to stop for an emergency vehicle — are being held pending the outcome of the criminal charge of car theft.

Barley was picked up on radar on Hillcrest Drive and led city police on an 85 mile per hour chase on State 49 for five miles until he lost control of the vehicle, which rolled over in a field, according to the report.

When taken to the county jail he used abusive language and attempted to kick one of the arresting officers, police said. A check showed that the defendant had been released five days earlier from the Outagamie County jail and that the stolen car belonged to Gerhardt Moericke, Appleton.

WAUPACA — A 12-man jury has found Thomas A. Maggio, 19, 503 S. Main St., guilty of hit and run. Judge Nathan Wiese, County Court Branch 2, ordered the defendant to pay a $100 fine, cost and fees. Maggio was given 45 days in which to pay.

Maggio was arrested by city police on April 28, about three hours after a truck owned by Vernon E. Mullet and parked at 506 Waupaca St. was struck and damaged by a car answering the description of one driven by Maggio.

Maggio insisted that it was his car but that he was not driving it.

WAUPACA — Edwin A. Christianson, 23, Ogdensburg, pleaded guilty Friday in County Court Branch 2 to operating after revocation. Judge Nathan Wiese ordered him to serve 90 days in the county jail and pay a fine of $150. He was given Huber Law privileges and may be transferred to Outagamie County where he is employed.

WAUPACA — Lee Allen Phillips, 20, 300 1/2 N. Water St., New London, pleaded guilty to reckless use of a firearm and damage to property after the charges were amended to misdemeanors in County Court Branch 2 Friday. The charges relate to a shooting incident in New London.

Judge Nathan Wiese withheld sentence and placed Phillips on probation for two years on each count to the Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services. The probations run concurrently. Condition of probation is that Phillips spend the first 60 days in the county jail, with working privileges, and pay for his court-appointed attorney and other costs.

A third charge of disorderly conduct was dismissed.

His companions have been convicted and sentenced. Richard Southard, 17, 1302 Water St., New London, is on two years' probation and serving six months in the county jail and Neil E. Roman, 18, 501 E. Beacon St., New London, has 18 months' probation and is serving 90 days in the county jail.

physical education instructors to teach health programs, and many times, DPI has felt the health education has suffered.

Art and music, the two fine arts areas, also have suffered in the past when budgets become tight. These, too, are covered under the new set of standards.

"Art instruction will be provided in accordance with a written comprehensive art curriculum which is based on concepts developed through sensory awareness, aesthetic discrimination and skill development."

What is more, it will have to be provided for all students and will be under the direct supervision of an art teacher certified by DPI.

Music programs will also have to have a written curriculum which meets the approval of DPI. Included in the program will be singing, playing instruments, listening, movement, and music reading.

Cocktails at 6 p.m. will be followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, at $10 each, are available from Republican county chairmen or from Appleton attorney James Long, who is on Lorge's campaign committee.

Condition critical

MANAWA — An Osseo, Minn., man who was kicked in the head by a horse here Saturday was listed in critical condition this morning at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, where he was taken after the incident.

Roger Kilness was competing in the bareback bronc riding division at the 16th annual Mid-Western Rodeo and was thrown from the horse. One of its hooves struck him in the head, knocking him unconscious.

He was taken to New London Community Hospital in a private auto, with an escort from the Waupaca County Police, and later transferred to the hospital at Neenah.

At the time of the accident, the Manawa Rescue Squad was at the high school, administering to five Sheboygan youths who were overcome by heat. The squad also made four other runs during the rodeo's afternoon performance.

Parade winners in the horse division were the Clintonville Lions Club. The Manawa Centennial Float took second and the Outagamie Producers Co-Op, third.

Patrolman, Green Bay man struck by car near Waupaca athletic field

WAUPACA — City patrolman Brent Feltheim and Robert J. Bonow 25, Green Bay, were struck by a passing motorist at 10:14 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of Churchill and Royalton streets, while Feltheim was directing traffic from the band competition at the athletic field.

Feltheim, 22, Northgate Trailer Court, received a dislocated right shoulder, bruised ribs and right hip. He is reported in satisfactory condition at Riverside Community Memorial Hospital. Bonow was treated for multiple bruises and abrasions. Both men were taken by ambulance to the hospital.

According to the report filed by the county traffic department, Bonow had stopped to inform Feltheim about a possible drunken driver he had been following for 10 miles on State 54, en route from Wisconsin Rapids, when a car, driven east on Royalton by a 16-year-old youth, pulled around the line of traffic and struck the two men standing in the center of the intersection. Charges are pending against the youth.

Club captured first place for group riders.

Ponies were given away at each rodeo performance. Alice Spring, Green Bay; Brian Kasubaski, Neshkora; and Matt Schultz, Bear Creek, were the winners.

A total of 146 entries in the rodeo competition topped the all-time high set in 1972 when there were 130 entries. Cowboys from throughout the Midwest and the country entered the competition to share in the $2,600 purse setup by the Lions, plus the entry fees for each of the six events.

Mrs. Kaplan takes new state post

MADISON, Wis (AP) — Esther Kaplan resigned Friday as Sen. Gaylord Nelson's campaign treasurer to avoid a fuss over her appointment to the new State Elections Board.

Mrs. Kaplan told Nelson in a letter that her resignation would be effective Monday, when she is sworn in as an elections board member.

"While I do not believe any conflict of interest exists between my membership on the board and my activities as campaign treasurer of the Nelson for Senate Committee, I want to avoid any possibility that the issue might arise at some future date," she said.

Mrs. Kaplan had said she would abstain from actions by the board concerning the Nelson committee.

She told a newsman she decided to resign because serving on the board would be a greater public service than working for the committee.

The board oversees new rules which require candidates to divulge their sources of political income.

"The new campaign reform act has made significant improvements in the campaign finance reporting system, and I feel privileged to serve on the elections board," Mrs. Kaplan said.

"It is essential there should be complete public trust in the integrity of the members," she said.

Mrs. Kaplan, of Madison, was appointed to the board by state Sen. Fred Risser, D-Madison, as a representative of Democratic state senators.

Others on the eight-member board were chosen by party caucuses in the legislature, the state Republican and Democratic parties, the State Supreme Court and Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Mrs. Kaplan also has been treasurer of the Friends of Pat Lucey Committee.

Obey debate offer taken by Burger

MARSHFIELD, Wis (AP) — Josef Burger, a Republican candidate for Congress, has accepted a debate offer from Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis.

"The proposition of public debate is welcome," Burger said. "It is the very core of the democratic process."

Obey, seeking a fourth term in northern Wisconsin's 7th Congressional District, has suggested debates be held in Stevens Point and Superior.

Topics are uncertain. Burger contends the "main domestic problem facing the country is the question of whether the economy is going to grow or stagnate, depending on our energy resources."

Burger, of Wausau, is a political science professor in the University of Wisconsin center system.

He accuses Obey of lacking "any thorough understanding of the international situation."

Obey has said the proposed impeachment of President Nixon could interfere with efforts to schedule debates, and that he hopes they can be held during the final week of the campaign.

KAUKAUNA — The second meeting of the recently organized American Association of Retired People will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the community room of the Bank of Kaukauna.

Interested persons signing up at this meeting will be classed as charter members of the organization.

Should Your Wife Collect Rare Plates?

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — A successful art dealer in this Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with high resale potential.

According to Thomas Gilmore II, president of this dealership, a woman bought one exceptional plate for $25 in 1965. It now brings $1,050, and another she purchased at $10 in 1969 now sells for $245.

Mr. Gilmore says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes." He offers a free report telling what to look for, what to pay, when to sell, and much more.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to Bradford Galleries, 658B Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. Because of limited quantities, please mail your request before July 20, 1974.

Oneidas select trust committee

Post-Crescent news service
ONEIDA — Nine members of a new Oneida trust committee, which will serve as guardian of funds from a 1967 Federal Court award, were selected Saturday.

They are William Borchardt, Amelia Cornelius, Norbert Hill Jr., Norbert Hill Sr., Anna John, Irene Moore, Adam Webster, Stanley Webster and Ervin Wheelock.

The trust committee was set up by directive of the general tribal council April 28. The first members will have one year terms.

An advisory committee, to include an accountant, banker, attorney and economist, also will be organized.

The tribe is awaiting notice from the Secretary of Interior about approval of its plan for handling the money. Then elected members will be notified of the date for the first trust committee meeting.

Appleton buses continue to show gain in ridership

Appleton's private bus operation has experienced ridership gains for the eighth consecutive month, figures released by the state Department of Transportation show.

The latest increase is a 17 per cent jump in ridership in May over the same month last year for Appleton City Transit, a subsidiary of Fox River Bus Lines, Inc. That compares with an overall ridership increase of 4 per cent, which also represents the eighth consecutive monthly ridership increase registered statewide.

The Appleton system has shown passenger count increases ever since it bought newer buses and increased frequency of service back in October, 1973. The Appleton Transit Commission is considering a consultant's report that recommends other improvements in local bus operation. It is expected to take action on the report's recommendation soon.

The actual jump in riders for May was 6,800 over a year ago, from 39,000 to 45,800.

Increases in ridership were also registered for bus systems in Green Bay (29 per cent) and Oshkosh (2 per cent). For Green Bay, it was its fifth straight monthly ridership increase, while Osh kosh registered its third consecutive monthly gain.

Fond du Lac's city-owned bus system was one of only three bus systems in the state that showed a ridership decline during May. The decrease was 2 per cent under last year.

The continuing bus ridership gains are attributed to a number of things: Better equipment and management stimulated by increased federal and state aids and the energy crisis.

Pressure cooker livin'

Fox Cities residents who spent last winter yearning for the blazing heat of summer might well yearn for the icy cold today.

The Fourth of July holiday brought hot, humid temperatures to the Valley, bringing the Appleton high to 87 in a 24-hour period. The low only dropped to 69.

The next few days should be just as

Weather forecast

Scattered areas of showers are forecast today across the nation. Showers are expected for most of the Pacific coast, the Southwest and southern Plains, the Southeast and the New England coastal areas. Police & fire

LITTLE CHUTE—Between $400 and $500 was reported missing from the Log Cabin Bar, E. Main St., following a break-in discovered by police about 4:30 a.m. Thursday.

Entry into the building was made by removing a screen, poking some object through the window pane and then reaching inside to unlock the window and slide it open.

Money was taken from two cash registers in the building. Only money, half dollars and quarters were taken with rolls of dimes and nickles untouched.

LITTLE CHUTE—Fire Chief Thomas Lamers estimated damage at $3,000 in a fire at the Alton Techlin home, 719 E. Main St., about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday.

The fire, believed to have been caused by faulty wiring, started in an upstairs bedroom, burned up the wall through a ceiling into the attic and also started the roof burning.

Techlin told Lamers that fuses in the house blew and when he went to the basement to replace them found that he had no new ones on hand. He went to town to get new ones when he heard the fire sirens. When he returned home a short time later he saw the fire trucks at his home. The fire was discovered by his wife when she went upstairs to pick up an item.

The high pressure system is affecting the rest of the state also and the National Weather Service warned that the livestock safety index could reach the danger category or emergency category in the state today.

The hot weather caused pavement to buckle on U.S. 41 in east-central Outagamie County and on Interstate 90 in Monroe County.

Sunset today at 8:39 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 5:18 a.m. Moonrise tonight at 10:31 p.m. Last Quarter on July 12.

The planet Jupiter, which follows the moon tonight, is now beginning a westward movement among the stars that will continue until early in November.

Permit variance OK'd

ELLINGTON — The town board has authorized a zoning variance for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foertsch for a permit to build a garage.

Board meets tonight

SHERWOOD — The village board of review will meet from 6 to 10 p.m. today at the village hall, according to Clerk Florian Schmidt.

Make voice heard for new consumer bill

Let's say you receive in the mail an unsolicited free sample of a new hair spray. For one reason or another, you consider the product dangerous, possibly containing substances which could be poisonous to your child, or which are explosive or which are suspected of being cancer-causing. You find out your neighbors—and probably hundreds of thousands of others—also have received samples.

To which federal agency do you complain? Who has the time, money and inclination to take up your case? Why was the manufacturer permitted to circulate the samples in the first place?

Is it Postal or food problem? Should you call the U.S. Postal Service, which supervises products sent through the mails? Or the Food & Drug Administration, which regulates and is supposed to ban dangerous cosmetics from the marketplace? Or should you contact the Consumer Product Safety Commission, because you believe the aerosol can and/or its contents are unsafe? Or should it be the Federal Trade Commission, because you think this is a highly questionable method of advertising such products to an unwary public?

The answer is inherent in my questions. You, America's individual consumer, probably have only a faint—if any—idea of how to plead a consumer cause, small or large, before any regulatory agency in Washington. You at most surely wouldn't—even if you could—take the necessary weeks, months or even years to check into all the possible regulatory agencies to determine which, if any, was ready to move quickly to discover whether or not the can of hairspray you received was indeed dangerous and should be recalled at once.

You do have an impressive and expanding army of spokesmen and women attempting to make your interests and demands known at various levels of government, in the various federal regulatory agencies, in the federal courts. But you are still utterly disorganized and undersupplied with the kind of information essential if you are to present your case with the appropriate money, time, manpower and womanpower before even a fraction of the agencies to which it should be submitted.

ITEM Your voice wasn't even heard when the Interstate Commerce Commission set freight rates on virgin materials transported by our federally regulated railroads at about half the rates chargeable for transporting used materials. Yet not only would an equitable freight pricing system be beneficial to our environment by encouraging (rather than discouraging) recycling of scarce materials, but it would also tend to lower prices on products made from the reused materials and minerals.

ITEM The Food & Drug Administration approved the use of DES (diethylstilbestrol) as a "morning after" birth control pill at a time when evidence was mounting that children of women who took DES during pregnancy may be more vulnerable to vaginal cancer than those who didn't. This agency did not even require warnings to women of this risk.

ITEM The Civil Aeronautics Board, which fixes air fares and routes, has been granting the airline industry fare rise after fare rise and has eliminated many low-cost fare deals. "Nobody spoke for the consumer in these actions," charges Sen. Frank Moss (D-Utah), one of the key Senate sponsors of the 1974 Consumer Protection Agency Act, now facing a bitter Senate fight. "Nobody is insisting on competitive air routes in places where there is no competition. Today you can't leave Salt Lake City on a flight going to the East Coast after 2:55 p.m."

Reason for new agency On my desk as I type this are dozens of other infuriating examples dramatizing why a new independent Federal Consumer Protection Agency has been proposed to be your first representative non-regulatory agency at the top levels of government.

For obvious reasons, the new agency is opposed by a powerful and well organized array of industry trade associations and private business corporations. Lined up for the bill are virtually all major consumer protection organizations—including the Consumer Federation of America, Consumers Union, Ralph Nader's Congress Watch—and the AFL-CIO, the United Auto Workers, the Sierra Club. This, the 93rd Congress, is the third Congress to debate enactment of a Consumer Protection Agency, this is the second time the CPA has faced the threat of being filibustered to death (the first time in 1972).

And where do you, the consumer, stand? Lined up against "for" if the bill is killed again, among the reasons will be your silence, due to your near-total ignorance (or innocence) of its provisions and potential importance to you.

'Friends' present special show

Dick Hamilton (the Appleton lawyer turned thespian complete with night-cap) sings in fast-chat patter all about his nightmares (from Gilbert & Sullivan's "Iolanthe"). Then Dick and Ken Anderson (the latter a drama prof. at UW-Fox Valley Center in real life) do the two fathers bit in "Plant a Radish" from the musical "The Fantastiks."

Soprano Sandy Herwig solos the hauntingly beautiful "If I Loved You" from the musical "Carousel" and "Try to Remember" is sung in like manner by baritone Gordon Mortensen.

Comedienne Barbara Tungate walks into the audience singing and directing her nuances to specific persons in the audience—her specialties from "Oklahoma" ("I Can't Say No!") and "Showboat" ("Life Upon a Wicked Stage.") She brings down the house everytime she does it.

If you haven't heard and seen these musical tidbits from Riverside Players' various shows over the years of summer seasons, you've been missing something. Now in its fourth year (its season just completed), Friends have been giving their Musical Highlights of Riverside Players to almost any organization or group which would listen. They have gone over the hundred organization mark with this season's programs and every group which has had them as guests has applauded its acclaim.

The usual program collection opens with an all-member rouser, such as the theme song from "Oklahoma!" or "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man." The delightful, melodic "Edelweiss" from "Sound of Music" seems to have become their ending theme because listeners always like it and chime in with willingness.

Friends came into being in 1969, after the Players' production of "The Most Happy Fella." Why not promote the summer musical theater in Riverside Park with excerpts from the show?

The question was answered immediately with the director of Riverside Players, Ken Anderson, taking on the job of narrator (in both writing the delivery of the words). Backing him up were three magnificent "hams" stagestruck and good at it—Barbara Tungate, of Neenah, Gordon Mortensen, of Menasha, and Sandra Herwig, of Appleton. Since then, Joyce Kloosterboer and Richard (Dick) Hamilton, both of Appleton, have joined the singing actors.

Mrs. Tungate fell into the job of coordinator, taking charge of programs, their dates and rehearsals. At first, the important job of pianist-accompanist was in the hands of Joanne White, with Liese Spiegelberg at the piano since last December. Two standbys also are on call—Jim Fradrich and Dave Peperkorn, both Appleton pianists. From the beginning there have been other Fox Cities actor-singers performing with Friends, such as Chuck Seter, Jim Cole, Mary Floden, Fred Hrubceky, Ned Rightor and Judy Huus.

The idea behind the Friends of Riverside Players is quite simple. They are unique boosters of the summer theater which performs every year under the aegis of Neenah Recreation Department in the pavilion at Riverside Park. They provide continuity to Riverside Players activities between seasons, but more important, they provide a tremendous community service. (Would you believe they have performed for nearly 10,000 persons since they started?) Besides, another facet of service provides opportunity to perform for those interested in theater and to keep the study and workshops connected with theater going through meetings.

A sort of by-product has enlarged the Friends' scope of activities between seasons. A readers' theater has grown up through a special sub-committee Doris Cobb, Appleton, is current chairman.

Richard Harding, Neenah, is current president of Friends of Riverside Players. Mrs. Tungate is vice president; Mary Keepers, Neenah, secretary; John Schaidler, Neenah, treasurer; Hamilton, Doris Cobb, both of Appleton, Bob Gellert, Menasha, Don Schweiss, Carl Wimer and Ben Anderson, all of Neenah, are directors.

The whole program idea evolved from the premise that the "usual recital" was out; something better had to be offered within the repertory framework of Riverside musicals. The result is that Ken Anderson has to back-ground the program and each of its segments as narrator. Sometimes he delivers bits of dialogue from the piece, more often the singer-actors do when it's needed to make the story line clear. They all do it deftly, so well in fact that church groups, organizations, service clubs and convention groups began clamoring for their drama-musicals.

Director Anderson and Company have good reason for ending the Friends' season. They are already at work for the first production of Riverside Players. Already the season has started for the Neenah summer theater.

"Man of La Mancha" is deep in rehearsal with Mortensen in the lead role of "the man." Anderson is busy directing with Mrs. Tungate his active assistant. The others are doing their various jobs on the show which opens in the Pavilion July 25 for the weekend. The actors are rehearsing the Joe Darion lyrics, the orchestra is practicing the music by Mitch Leigh and both directors are keeping book in hand, following the words of Dale Wasserman.

Quiet moment

Meredith Baxter and David Birney, co-stars in the cancelled Jewish-Catholic romance series, "Bridget Loves Bernie," sit by the water during a quiet moment recently near the American Shakespeare Theater in Stratford, Conn. The couple married April 10, after meeting on the series and deciding to make theirs a real-life romance. Birney is appearing at the theatre this summer. (AP Wirephoto)
